Roosevelt Plan
Also Would Abolish
Air Safety Board,
Affect Drug Agency

By Felix Cotten,
Post Staff Writer

A bitter fight was threatened last night over President Roosevelt's proposal to abolish the Air Safety Board and to place the Civil Aeronautics Authority within the framework of the Commerce Department.

The proposal was contained in departmental reorganization plan No. 4, forwarded to Congress yesterday by the President.

Transfer of most of the Food and Drug Administration from the Agriculture Department to the Federal Security Agency, and transfer of the Weather Bureau from the Agriculture Department to the Commerce Department, are provided for in the plan, which will become effective in 90 days unless Congress in the interim disapproves. The transferred portion of the Food and Drug Administration will operate as an independent unit.

As a result of the action taken with respect to the Civil Aeronautics Authority, Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, one of the authors of the act creating the agency, offered in the Senate a resolution calling for disapproval of both the third and fourth reorganization plans.

News of the Civil Aeronautics reshuffle struck with lightning impact in the offices of the agency itself. Officials, while reserving opinions, said they had had no information that such a move was coming. The President said the new reorganization plan was expected to result in a saving of about $30,000 annually in administrative expenses.

Stephen T. Early, White House press relations secretary, emphasized that plan No. 4 would be the last under the Reorganization Act, which expires on January 20, 1941, the end of the President's second term. Early pointed out that Government employees who had lived in fear that they might be reorganized out of their jobs could begin breathing more easily.

The President, however, aroused renewed third-term speculation by recommending that the act, which, as it stands, exempts entirely some 21 Government agencies from any possible reshuffling be reenacted without any exemptions. He said the four reorganization plans which he had drawn did not exhaust the transfers, consolidations and abolitions that may be desirable.

His only explanation of this recommendation was that "the structure and management of our Government, like the activities and services it performs, must be kept abreast of social and economic change."

Reenactment of the law without exemptions would place in the hands of whoever is elected President next November greater power than the present act conveyed.

Two Lose $7,500 Jobs
The offices of members of the Air Safety Board are abolished along with the board. This will throw board members Thomas Hardin and C. B. Allen out of their $7,500-a-year jobs.

Members of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, to be known as the Civil Aeronautics Board, will absorb the functions of the Air Safety Board. The administrator of Civil Aeronautics, who has supervision over commercial aviation, will work under the direction of the Secretary of Commerce.

The arrangement revived recollection of the trouble encountered by the old Bureau of Air Commerce of the Commerce Department. The Civil Aeronautics Authority, it is

Situation 'Critical'
After Union Rejects
U. S. Compromise

The National Symphony Orchestra Association at a special meeting yesterday afternoon decided to give up all plans for next season.

The vote, which may make next Sunday afternoon's concert in Constitution Hall the 9-year-old Symphony Orchestra's swan song, followed a report from L. Corrin Strong, association president, on "the critical situation" confronting the orchestra as a result of the deadlock between the orchestra's board of directors and the Musicians Protective Union. The meeting took place in the United States Chamber of Commerce auditorium.

The report recommended that activities looking to a 1940-41 season, as well as to summer concerts at the Water Gate this summer, be abandoned.

However, the door to future negotiations with the union was left open, and an official of the association last night said the membership's action "did not preclude the board's consideration of any proposition the union might care to make in the future."

A spokesman of the union said he could offer no comment on this. See SYMPHONY, Page 3, Column 2.

Attorney General Robert Jackson was attacked and defended on the Senate floor yesterday over alleged failure to prosecute Communists, while Maryland and District Committee for its recent raid on their Baltimore headquarters.

Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, charged that Communists have violated the law "on every hand" but were not sent to jail, and he asked:

"Where does this immunity come from? Where do the Communists get their protection?"

Witnesses Argue

Almost simultaneously, bitterness which has marked the Dies Committee investigation into Communist and Fascist activities, flared into a brief, personal exchange between rival witnesses waiting outside the committee room to testify. Last night by telephone a man complained he had been beaten up after he testified.

The day was marked also by refusal of three more Communists to answer questions of the Dies Committee relating to party membership. One of the witnesses testified that he is employed on a WPA project at Chicago under an assumed name.

Klan Reported Active
In still another development it was revealed that a truckload of material seized by committee agents and police at Philadelphia a week ago had been returned to a Philadelphia court following issuance of warrants for two committee agents and a police lieutenant.

Charges that a half-dozen fiery crusade demonstrations by the Ku Klux Klan have followed the Dies Committee raid at Baltimore came a short time later from the Communist executive committee for Maryland and the District of Columbia.

Cold Forecast Fails to Chill
Plans for Cherry Blossom Fete

The weatherman last night cast a bit of gloom over the elaborate plans for the cherry blossom festival tonight, but officials promise the show will go on.

Rain was forecast for today, fore-runner of a belated cold wave which it was expected would drive the mercury into the 30s this afternoon and continue through tomorrow. Forecasters said the cold wave, which would parallel a belt of snow from Maine to Kentucky, probably would be accompanied by strong winds.

It was feared this combination might destroy the young cherry blossoms as a similar condition did several years ago.

Despite the change in weather, Edgar Morris, general chairman of the festival committee, said last night "we are not even thinking about bad weather." One official

For His Party
In Fall Battles

By Robert C. Albright,
Post Staff Writer

Republicans will win 10 to 12 more Senate seats in November and control the Senate in 1942 if present trends continue, Senator John G. Townsend, Jr., of Delaware, chairman of the Republican Senatorial campaign committee, forecast yesterday.

It was the first 1940 G. O. P. Senate claim, and it came from the man who successfully called the turn on the 1938 Republican pickup of seven Senate seats.

Townsend said he based his prediction on trends shown in recent primaries and special Congressional elections, and on private information from States where Democratic seats are at stake.

Forecast Challenged

The forecast was promptly challenged by Senator Prentiss M. Brown, of Michigan, chairman of the Democratic Senatorial campaign committee, who declared Democrats in the Senate "will maintain a safe majority, substantially as it now is."

"The vote in Wisconsin last week and in Illinois on Tuesday shows the Democrats are likely to hold their own, with perhaps slightly smaller majorities," said Brown. "I can't see any Republican trend."

Townsend's prediction that Republicans will raise their present Senate minority from 23 to about 35 in November, and go on to control of the Senate two years thereafter, followed Congressional Republican predictions that the G. O. P. will organize the House next year, "whoever wins the Presidency."

Senate House Claims

The Delaware Republican joined in the House claims earlier put forward by House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, Jr., and Representative J. William Ditter, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Republican Congressional campaign committee. They based their forecast on consistent recent Republican corn belt victories in Ohio, Iowa and Nebraska special elections.

Talk centered on Senatorial and Congressional prospects as spokesmen of both parties conceded the Presidential race is confused by European war developments and their possible effect on a third term decision. All hands were agreed Mr. Roosevelt can have the Democratic nomination for the asking.

Talk centered on Senatorial and Congressional prospects as spokesmen of both parties conceded the Presidential race is confused by European war developments and their possible effect on a third term decision. All hands were agreed Mr. Roosevelt can have the Democratic nomination for the asking.

While Townsend would not discuss individual candidacies, the States in which Republican Senate prospects were rated as best are topped by Ohio, (now held by the vote-getting, Donaghey, retiring); Nebraska, (now held by Burke, defeated Tuesday for renomination by New Deal Gov. Roy L. Cochran); Pennsylvania, (now held by Guffy, who is battling for renomination); and Indiana, (now held by Minton, Senate Majority whip).

Other States in which Democratic Senate seats were believed threatened were Utah, Connecticut, West Virginia, and Maryland.

Far-Flung Battle
Of Navies Adds
A Glowing Chapter
To Sagas of the Sea

By Robert P. Post,

London, April 11.—A tremendous battle which has been raging over the North Sea and off the coasts of Norway, Sweden and Denmark between British and German ships and aircraft is still continuing.

Even if the admiralty were willing, it probably couldn't give all the details of this battle which is dispersed over thousands of square miles, where warships meet and lose each other, and where planes come from the sky, drop their bombs and depart, and where submarines send their messages of death, dive and vanish.

Even the high command at the admiralty doesn't know the full story of this new sea saga. But from past inquiry—and above all from Winston Churchill's review in the House of Commons today—rough outlines of the picture can be traced, with the colors and details to be filled in later. It is necessarily rough because it is still proceeding.

The story starts Sunday night. The main British fleet was at anchor in Scapa Flow, but three separate mine-laying squadrons, composed mostly of destroyers, were steaming through the dark to lay mine-fields in Norwegian waters. Somewhere north of them lay a strong British covering force.

Enemy Steams Out

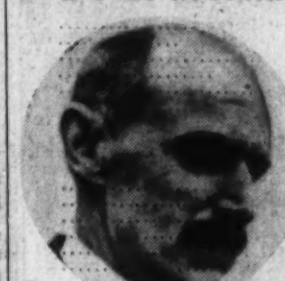

Sunday night, reconnaissance aircraft of the R. A. F. reported that German battle-cruisers, with a number of cruisers, destroyers and other vessels had put to sea.

Signals winked, and the grand fleet started to sweep south and east, with the object of placing the ships between the Germans and their base. It was the Glowworm, one of the British destroyers, engaged in mine-laying, which made the first contact with the German fleet, and paid for it with her life.

They hid in the woods, which were machine-gunned by the Germans, and escaped injury even though bullets were hitting the treetops all around them.

Other sources reported Crown Princess Marthe had fled to Sweden.

Stockholm, April 11.—When the Germans today mass-bombed Nyberg, 20 miles from the Swedish border, where the Norwegian government and army command had been located, King Haakon and Prince Olav, who were dining in the town with Premier Nygaardsvold, are said to have had a narrow escape.

They hid in the woods, which were machine-gunned by the Germans, and escaped injury even though bullets were hitting the treetops all around them.

Berlin, April 11.—Germany thrust a protective arm into Scandinavia in the "nick of time" to forestall an alleged British plan to attack the Reich from Norway, Germans contended tonight.

They defied the Allies to break the German hold in the north, which they said was being consolidated with a steady, unbroken flow of reinforcements from Germany, and claimed new successes in the naval-air war.

'First Crunch of War'

Nazi Fleet Crippled, Churchill
Says; Naval Battle Still Rages

(Churchill Text, Page 6.)

By Drew Middleton,
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, April 11.—The somber shapes of Britain's fleet, decimated already as the destroyers of more than 18 Nazi vessels and perhaps upward of 55,000 Nazi lives, tossed and fought in prolonged battle tonight, charged by Winston Churchill with the task of sinking every German ship in the gateways to the Baltic.

The "first crunch of war" set off by German invasion of Denmark and Norway, raged on in the stormy northern sea, and the Royal Navy was bidding for total extinction of Hitler's sea power.

To Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty and director of strategy of all the British armed services, the navy's feat of the last two days "are worthy of any in our history."

Netherlands Ready

By the Associated Press

The Hague (Friday), April 12.—Official sources disclosed early today that the Netherlands government is taking steps to secure the country against "dangers" from within as well as from outside the Netherlands in view of the fast-moving war developments in Europe.

The nature of the steps taken and planned to insure the security of the country were not announced.

[The United Press reported from Amsterdam that women, children and infirm men were being evacuated by the Dutch government from the border town of Kinderdijk. The report said "other precautions" were being taken.] A semi-official statement said the government was "fully convinced of danger which might threaten internally."

Big Push Awaited

Paris, April 11.—Total war may be only a matter of hours. On the Maginot Line between the Rhine and the Moselle many signs point to an early enemy attack, and all leave has been stopped for the French army.

German troop concentrations are reported along the Netherlands frontier, especially at points in the north and south. The Belgian army is standing ready. Evacuation measures are being taken in Luxembourg. The storm seems about to burst.

The German plan can but be surmised. Probably it represents the second step in a strategic scheme to gain access to the open sea. The first was to occupy Denmark and Norway, but Norwegian resistance and the determined counterattack by the Allied naval forces seem to jeopardize success, the Netherlands and Belgium would be the next logical objectives.

Netherlands Threatened

Simultaneously, the German high command might hope to fix the Allied armies behind the Maginot Line by making a violent demonstration there. Such appears to be the outlook from the information available tonight.

News of the threat to The Netherlands comes from several sources and some significance attaches to the fact that one of these is Italian. So far as the Rhine-Moselle front is concerned the signs indicating an impending German move have not been revealed, but it may be assumed that in addition to intense patrol activity, aerial observers have reported massing of troops and movements of mechanized columns.

Belgium to Aid

In any case, surprise is now out of the question. The Allies and the neutrals are all prepared. Moreover, during the long period of inaction they have had time to consider every possibility and devise a parry for every thrust.

Belgium has made it clear that she would aid The Netherlands in the event of invasion of that country.

BULLETINS

Paris Guns in Action

London (Friday), April 12 (U.P.). A radio broadcast from Paris picked up here at 4:15 a. m. today said that anti-aircraft guns protecting the French capital had gone into action. No air raid alarm had been sounded at that time, however, the broadcast said.

Italy Calls Ships Home

New York, April 11 (U.P.).—All Italian merchant ships have been ordered to return home, and the Italian navy is ready for action, according to a Rumanian radio announcer heard in New York tonight. He hinted at Italy's possible entrance in the war soon on the German side.

'Spy' Killing in Bucharest

Bucharest, April 11 (U.P.).—The murder of a couple identified by police as a German girl and a German munitions expert under Bucharest's Arch of Triumph caused observers tonight to fear it would lead to international complications.

Police said they had evidence the couple were Nazi spies and had been murdered by "the agent of another foreign power."

The man, whose name, like the girl's, was kept secret by police, was said to be a former employee of the German munitions firm of Krupp. The girl was identified only as a 25-year-old blonde.

British Claim 20 Planes

New York, April 11 (U.P.).—Twenty German planes have been shot down in the last few days by English fighters, according to a British Broadcasting Co. announcement picked up here by C. B. S. The R. B. C. broadcast was in German.

French Losses Claimed

New York, April 11 (U.P.).—The German radio, in a broadcast picked up here by C. B. S., asserted today that reliable Swedish sources had reported "sensational losses" to the French navy, adding:

"The French ship of the 10,000-ton class, Foch, was sunk when trying to force an entrance into the Skagerrak. Swedish papers also report that the French battleship Dunkerque has been badly damaged."

[In Paris, the French admiralty denied the above German report.]

Nations Asked to Protest

Buenos Aires, April 11 (U.P.).—The Argentine foreign ministry, it was stated semi-officially tonight, is inviting all American nations to sign a joint expression of indignation at Germany's invasion of Denmark and Norway.

Swedes Ordered to Port

Copyright by New York Times
New York, April 11.—The far-flung Swedish merchant marine of 1,300 vessels of nearly 1,350,000 gross tons, has been ordered to seek the shelters of the nearest neutral port because of the war in Scandinavia, Martin Kastengren, Swedish consul general in New York, revealed tonight.

Fight Rumored Off Ostend

Amsterdam (Friday), April 12 (U.P.).—Rumors reached Amsterdam early today of a battle off Ostend, Belgium, near the entrance to the heavily mined English Channel. It was believed possible German planes were attacking British or French warships or convoys, though the rumors could not be substantiated.

British Hit at Stavanger

Dondon (Friday), April 12 (U.P.).—The air ministry announced today that the Royal Air Force had made two attacks last evening on Germans who are in occupation of the Stavanger Airbase in Norway.

Hongkong (Friday), April 12 (U.P.).—All Norwegian and Danish ships engaged in the China coastal trade are reliably reported being assembled by British authorities at Hongkong. Eleven such ships now are here.

Yugoslavs Warned

Belgrade, April 11 (U.P.).—Leaflets warning Yugoslavs "Do not resist Germany if you value your freedom" showered down in the streets of Belgrade tonight. Police said the leaflets were thrown from speeding automobiles.

Battle at Narvik

By Peter C. Rhodes,
United Press Staff Writer

Abisko, Norwegian-Swedish Frontier, April 11.—Norwegian mobilization in northern Norway was completed today and it appeared that British warships and Norse troops had trapped the German landing force which seized the important iron ore port of Narvik, above the Arctic Circle.

Prime Minister Nygaardsvold broadcast to the people a manifesto of assurance that the government is determined to resist the German invasion to the bitter end.

In this sparsely populated sector around Narvik and northward there is a total population of 150,000 and of these about 30,000 are reported to have been arrayed in military formation to attack the German landing forces.

About 20,000 troops were held in readiness around Kirkenes, during the last stages of the Russian-Finnish war and these had been only partly demobilized.

Troops Rushed to Tromsø

Most of them were rushed to the fortified naval base at Tromsø. In the region around Tromsø there are many Norwegian forts constructed last autumn, some munitions and several airfields whose location I am unable to reveal.

The Norwegian troops are rushing light artillery and antitank material to position and should be able to cope with the German force at Narvik if the Allied blockade is effective.

At present, everything depends upon the British fleet holding the seaboard closed because there are only two other entrances to Narvik—one a highway to Tromsø, the other a railroad to the Swedish frontier, which is solidly in Norwegian hands.

The British were reported holding Svalvaer and Lodjengen and the north zone of the Westford, from which they can send out naval patrols.

British Landing Reported

(In London, Reuters (British) News Agency, quoting "authoritative" Norwegian circles in Stockholm, reported early today that "British forces are understood to have effected a landing a short distance south of Narvik and are endeavoring to join up with Norwegian forces."

[The same sources, said Reuters, reported the British and Norwegians were "in close contact near Bergen."

[An earlier report from Uddevalla, Sweden, also carried by Reuters, said British warships had been seen "apparently landing troops" from the coast of outer Oslo Fjord.]

The food situation in Narvik was reported to have become serious. According to reports reaching the frontier the Germans requisitioned all stocks they could find, but much had been hidden.

Completion of the general mobilization order issued Monday night was delayed because of bad transportation.

THE CAPITAL DEBUNKED

FATALISTIC: A few of our statesmen are resigned to an unbroken chain of Nazi triumphs all through 1940. They have a hunch that by the end of the year Germany will occupy or control all of continental Europe except France, Turkey, and perhaps Portugal.

Hitler already has conquered five independent nations and occupied them, and certain American observers who pride themselves on being "realistic" predict privately that before next winter seven more European countries may be under the swastika.

Some Senators are even urging that we send an Ambassador to Berlin promptly so as to "get in on the ground floor" with the new rulers of Europe and the most dominant world power—Germany which will have annexed 12 European lands.

FALSE PROPHECY: For one of the most quickly exploded prophecies of the year, Senator Bob Reynolds, of North Carolina, is being raised by his colleagues.

At about 5:30 last Monday Mr. Reynolds orated to the Senate (p. 627 of the Congressional Record):

"his prophecy jinxed Norway"

"Norway, Sweden and Denmark are today within a stone's throw (of the war) and they are not going to get into it."

At precisely that hour Nazi troops were entering Norwegian harbors, and Norwegian batteries were firing at Nazi warships, and Denmark was being invaded.

TRUE PROPHECY: Meanwhile, wealthy, forthright Joseph E. Davies, special adviser to the Secretary of State, is receiving some acclaim as one prophet whose predictions turned out to be correct.

Months before the war began last summer he called the turn accurately.

His only error seems to be that he felt Italy would be fighting for Hitler, and even that may yet turn out to be correct.

NERVOUS WIVES: These are anxious days for the wives of Senators and Representatives whose husbands are involved in warmly contested primaries.

The day of the Illinois primary the wife of Senator Slattery was lunching at the Argentine Embassy and she was so concerned that she almost (but not quite) couldn't eat.

COCKTAIL GOSSIP: Among Washingtonians who have been close to the German Embassy crowd there is gossip that Nazi observers in New York and the Capital have informed Berlin that American neutrality can now be regarded as a permanent policy, and that no substantial American aid to the Allies is possible within three or four years.

INSIDE STUFF: At last the Monopoly Committee is getting down to brass tacks. Under Senator O'Mahoney's triple-threat circumlocutionary, prolix questioning Charles Kettering, the amiable chief of General Motors research laboratories, was forced to admit (1) that certain pastures poison white cattle and sheep but not black, and (2) that one ton of hay dried in the dark is worth four tons dried in the light.

But what's that got to do with monopoly?

BLITZBALONY: Certain radio announcers appear to be sufficiently pro-German that some officials wonder whether they shouldn't be forced to register as foreign agents. They never overlook a chance to apologize for or justify Nazi acts (even the invasion of Norway) or to give England a kick in the pants. (But some seem pro-Ally, too.)

CAPITAL SNAPSHOTS: Tennessee's handsome Senator Tom Stewart is lunching in the Senate restaurant with two of the prettiest constituents (maybe they were his daughters) who have adorned that sanctum this year.

G. O. P. Dark Horse Joe Martin (Mass.) with his arms around Democratic Senator Barkley and Chandler, of Kentucky, as those two gentlemen, having sung "Old Kentucky Home" as a duet, join in a final chorus at a banquet.

Hook Denies Machines Have Cut Steel Jobs

Statisticians Question Figures, Conclusions At Monopoly Inquiry.

Congressional hearings on technology yesterday gave statisticians a field day as Charles R. Hook argued with charts and curves that labor-saving machinery has created thousands of new jobs in rolling mills, blast furnaces and steel works.

The president of the American Rolling Mill Co., aided by a classroom pointer and two Western Union boys, spread before the Temporary National Economic Committee a score of diagrams—all designed to "explode the theory" that technological advances cause unemployment.

Government economists for the TNEC interrupted Hook frequently to question the value of certain statistics, request sources and discuss "controls" or "terminal years."

Completeness Questioned
The witness was questioned at length on a chart showing employment in the iron and steel industry as mounting from 399,914 in 1923 to 502,417 in 1937, an increase of 25.6 per cent.

Dr. H. Dewey Anderson, economic consultant to the committee, complained that two isolated years "don't make a trend." Hook agreed to prepare figures for each year since 1923.

Hook acknowledged that technological developments "cause some immediate displacement of individual workers," but maintained that "such temporary dislocations are inevitable in a progressive society and they need cause concern only when the displaced workers are unable to find other employment without prolonged delay."

The unemployment period for displaced workers is briefest, he said, when conditions are favorable for the "free flow of capital."

If the Government takes steps to "recreate confidence," the unemployment can be shifted "from the retail rolls to the payroll," Hook asserted.

O'Mahoney Dissents
Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, committee chairman, observed that "the steady and striking increase" in employment in manufacturing industries from 1932 to 1937, as displayed in figures placed on the record by Hook, does not indicate lack of confidence on capital's part.

Normal population growth would have brought about a greater increase in employment, if full confidence had existed, Hook replied.

The witness, a former president of the National Association of Manufacturers, recalled that Congress had ordered an inquiry into business deterrents, including taxes, when it created the TNEC, while hearings have not yet been held in this field.

He said numerous business and industrial leaders would be glad to testify in such an investigation.

Hook stated that the steel industry cannot increase employment by reducing the work week below the present 40 hours. The present work week is "the minimum for economic production."

If hours were cut further, the industrialist said, "you would have to maintain the present weekly income of the workers. The price of the product would rise to a point where sales declined and the industry was unable to give work to as many men as are now employed."

New Project Promising
Hook named prefabricated steel houses as one of the most promising research projects now under way in the steel industry. Such dwellings already constructed furnish more "dollar-for-dollar value" than existing housing types, he said, though he could not predict that large-scale distribution was in the "immediate offing."

The Gallup Poll

Poll Indicates Ohio Leaning G. O. P. Today With Indiana in Democratic Column

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., April 11.—State-wide surveys just completed in Ohio and Indiana by the American Institute of Public Opinion show Democratic-Republican strength closely balanced in that region today—a region likely to be one of the crucial battlegrounds of the November election.

In Ohio—a State that has been on the winning side in every Presidential election since the days of William McKinley—the R e p u b l i c a n party is slightly ahead at the present time, the Institute's tests show.

In neighboring Indiana, however, the balance tips toward the Democrats.

Where these States will stand next November depends on the kind of a campaign that is waged, and on the course of events abroad—to mention only a few of the still imponderable factors. But the surveys emphasize the mental gains made by the G. O. P. in both these States since 1936 and the closeness of party strength there today.

Representative voters in both States were asked:

"Which party would you like to see win the Presidential election this year?" The answers of those with definite opinions on the question are:

OHIO VOTERS
Favoring Democrats... 49%

INDIANA VOTERS
Favoring Republicans... 45%

In both States approximately one person in seven said he was undecided about his party choice at present.

President Roosevelt carried both States by substantial majorities in 1936—Ohio by 61 per cent and Indiana by 57. But the surveys show that the Republicans are 12 points stronger in Ohio today than they were four years ago, while they are five points stronger in neighboring Indiana.

First official indications of a Republican swing in Ohio were registered in the mid-term elections of 1938, of course, when Buckeye Republicans elected John E. Bricker to the governorship and sent Robert A. Taft, now a Presidential favorite, to the United States Senate in close contests.

Another straw in the wind was the result of Congressional by-elections there last month, when the G. O. P. vote averaged 13 points greater than it had been in the same districts four years ago.

Today's survey shows that the trends revealed in these two isolated by-elections are fairly characteristic of the State as a whole.

In both Ohio and Indiana, moreover, majority opinion is still cool toward a third term.

Asked, "If President Roosevelt runs for a third term, will you vote for him?" Forty-two per cent in each State said "Yes," 58 per cent said "No."

Northern States Doubtful

With 17 States reported thus far in the Institute's pre-convention survey of party strength, the results show a close race in most Northern States at the present time.

Massachusetts, New Jersey, Michigan, Iowa and Ohio, the leaning Republican today, the surveys show, but in none of these States is the Republican majority greater than 54 per cent.

At the same time, the Democrats are ahead by 54 per cent or less in such vital States as New York, Pennsylvania, Minnesota, and Indiana. In virtually every Northern State where surveys have been made thus far there has been a sharp Democratic drop since 1936.

Incomplete as it still is, however, the State picture south of the Mason-Dixon line shows little or no defection from the Democrats since the last election.

Political Box Score to Date

In a pre-convention preview of the 1940 Presidential race the Gallup Poll is asking voters in each State: "Which party would you like to see win the Presidential election?" Following are the results for 17 States reported thus far:

Eden, Churchill Favored To Succeed Chamberlain

By Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., April 11.—Anthony Eden and Winston Churchill are the leading choices of the British people to succeed Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain as head of the British Government should Chamberlain retire, a Nation-wide survey by the British Institute of Public Opinion indicates.

Smaller votes were registered in the survey for Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax and for Major Clement Attlee, leader of the Opposition party.

The British Institute survey asked a cross-section of British voters:

"If Mr. Chamberlain were to retire, whom would you like to see succeed him as Prime Minister?" The replies were:

Anthony Eden... 28%
Churchill... 25%
Halifax... 7%
Attlee... 6%
Scattered... 23%
Undecided... 11%

Foreign political observers have found considerable significance in the survey results, since Mr. Eden and Mr. Churchill were both bitter opponents of the "appeasement" policy which was dropped before the Munich conference.

Mr. Eden resisted "appeasement" so bitterly that he was compelled to resign from office. Although he is now a member of the Cabinet as Dominions Secretary, his continued popularity with the British public may mean a larger role for him in any new Cabinet shake-up.

Church Group Opens Session in Martinsburg

Fruit Growers At Quiz Defend Chain Stores

Systems Are Vital Outlets, Producers Tell Committee

By the Associated Press
Representatives of Pacific Coast and New England fruit growers' organizations, opposing enactment of the Patman bill, told a House Ways and Means subcommittee yesterday that chain stores were vital market outlets for fresh fruits.

John Rice, of Marlboro, Mass., representing the Massachusetts Fruit Growers Association, said that enactment of the Patman bill would "completely disorganize" the fruit-growing industry. The measure introduced by Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, would levy graduated taxes on chain stores and, its author contends, force breaking up of the largest chain systems.

Rory Collins, of Hood River, Ore., an apple producer and spokesman for several farm groups, told the subcommittee that he regarded chain stores as "a very natural outgrowth of our economic system and a very necessary part of our distribution system."

"They have been in a large measure responsible for the wide development of our fresh fruit markets," he added.

Contrary to the statements of some previous witnesses who testified that chains featured fresh produce as "loss leaders" and thereby depressed the farmers' market, Collins said the chains had discouraged such practices in his part of the country. He cited as an example of co-operation by the chains with growers an instance in which they helped dispose of surplus pears through a Nation-wide sales campaign.

Rice recalled that after the 1938 hurricane had felled thousands of New England apple trees the chains featured apples in their stores with the result, he said, that growers were saved from ruinous losses.

J. F. Teeple, of Waupun, Wis., president of the Teeple Shoe Co., related that his company was on the verge of bankruptcy in 1935, when it received large orders from J. C. Penny Co., which enabled it to double its size and to increase wages.

Allegany Grand Jury Returns 25 True Bills

Cumberland, Md., April 11 (AP).—Three Pennsylvanians were indicted by the April session of the Allegany County grand jury, which returned 25 true bills today after four days of hearings.

The three, John H. Sanders, 21; his brother, Joseph, both of Monongahalia, and Raymond Piel, 21, of Verona, were named in one indictment charging them with breaking out of the county jail last February. They were recaptured four hours after they had sawed their way to freedom.

John Sanders also was named in five indictments charging larceny and receiving stolen goods; his brother in one charging burglary, and Piel on a charge of burglarizing the home of Edmund S. Burke, tire company president, here.

G. O. P. Senate In 1942 Seen By Townsend

Expects His Party Will Gain 10 to 12 Seats This Fall

Claim G. O. P. Vulnerable

Democratic campaign strategists countered with claims that several Republican seats are vulnerable. In Maine, former Gov. Brand, Democrat, if nominated, was given a chance for the Senate seat of Hale, retiring. Democrats expect to give both Johnson, of California, and Vandenberg, of Michigan, a battle for reelection and the Republican Senate seat held by Frazier, of South Dakota, was reported "in danger."

Townsend in pointing for 10 to 12 new Republican Senate seats said he believed there is possibility of even a higher outside figure if his belief in a Republican groundswell is established. He stressed that his forecast was based on continuance of present trends and that the 1940 political picture is still in the making.

Other developments: Chairman John Hamilton, of the Republican committee on arrangements for the G. O. P. national convention, called a meeting of his group for Tuesday in Philadelphia. The committee will decide whether to select at that time a permanent chairman and keynoter. House Minority Leader Martin and Gov. Stassen of Minnesota respectively have been mentioned for the two posts.

Curtis Named

Hamilton yesterday named Arthur M. Curtis, of Springfield, Mo., Republican national committeeman, his headquarters assistant in charge of organizational activities. He held a similar post in 1936 under former Republican Chairman Henry P. Fletcher.

Secretary of Interior Ickes said he would resign from the Cabinet with "Thanks for the buggy ride" if President Roosevelt is reelected. He said he thought the President "ought to have a free hand to start all over again" if that is what he would wish to do.

Ickes again said he did not know whether the President would run, but declared he would "have practically all of the Democratic delegates."

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace denied Republican assertions that Tuesday's election of a Republican in Nebraska's First District indicates a Republican trend. Wallace said the district was traditionally Republican and that the Democratic vote there, judged in relation to past elections, indicates the country is about 56 per cent Democratic.

No 'Go' Light For Television Yet, Fly Says

FCC Chief Denies He Predicted Action; R. C. A. Stocks Go Up

A report that the Federal Communications Commission was prepared to order full speed ahead for commercial television yesterday was said to have boosted the stock of the Radio Corporation of America and caused Chairman L. F. Fly to issue a denial that he had predicted what action the FCC would take.

The report was carried on news ticker tapes after Fly had called at the White House. Later the FCC chairman issued a formal statement saying that nothing he said upon leaving the White House should be construed as predicting what action the FCC may take.

He added that it is "hazardous to conjecture now when proper standardization may be agreed upon and commercial operation undertaken."

Green Light Expected

The opinion prevailed in the radio industry, nevertheless, that the FCC will give the television industry the "green light" again shortly after concluding its present inquiry.

Commissioner T. A. M. Craven, the only FCC member who voted against reopening the television hearing, yesterday told the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee by letter that he had tried to halt the commission's action both at a meeting March 22 and on the following day when the order was issued.

Following the brief session, Chairman Burton K. Wheeler said no further hearings will be held. Committee members indicated that the Lundeen resolution calling for an investigation of the FCC will be pigeonholed.

The commission is expected to conclude its hearings today and to take the television issue under advisement.

R. M. A. Minutes Subpoenaed

A subpoena for the stenographic records of the Radio Manufacturers Association's board meeting on February 8 was issued by the FCC after Bond Geddes, executive vice president, said he could not furnish them without permission of the directors.

The meeting was addressed by David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America.

The FCC also issued a subpoena for all R. M. A. correspondence relating to television that was written between the two commission hearings on television, the first of which was in January.

Among the witnesses heard yesterday were Alfred H. Morton, vice president of the National Broadcasting Co. in charge of television; Elmer W. Engstrom, director of television research for R. C. A. at Camden, and Edward M. Martin, attorney for the Farnsworth Radio & Television Corporation.

CAA Shift Plan Threatens Fight said, was set up to get away from these difficulties.

The fight which appears to be brewing, however, is based primarily on the abolition of the Air Safety Board.

Pilots May Oppose Step

Indication was that the Airline Pilots Association would oppose the CAA reshuffling proposal. The commercial aviation industry was intimating, may oppose the transfer. Reorganization plan No. 3, not effective as yet since it was forwarded to Congress only last week, provided for definite separation of the functions of the administrator from those of the board.

Under the new plan, the Civil Aeronautics Board will retain, independently of the Secretary of Commerce, its quasi-judicial and rule-making functions.

Forestry Transfer Out

McCarran, attacking the proposal, said it would destroy the effectiveness of the CAA and "make a hodgepodge of all aeronautical regulation."

Failure of the reorganization plan to "provide for transfer of the Forest Service from the Agriculture Department to the Interior Department meant the end of this highly controversial proposal."

All functions of the Food and Drug Administration with the exception of administration of the National Food Act and the 1910 antiseptic Act are transferred to the jurisdiction of Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt.

Hospitals to FSA

St. Elizabeths Hospital and Freedmen's Hospital are transferred from the Interior Department to the Federal Security Agency, as are all functions of the Interior Department with regard to Howard University and the Columbia Institution for the Deaf.

Functions of the Agriculture Department Soil Conservation Service relating to public lands are transferred to the Interior Department, which has jurisdiction over public lands.

Interdepartmental Messenger Service

Interdepartmental messenger services are consolidated within the Postoffice Department.

The Weather Bureau was transferred to the Commerce Department, the President explained, because of the importance of the bureau's functions to commerce. The bureau, he pointed out, has a "major responsibility" in the field of air transportation.

Duties of the Treasury and Interior

Duties of the Treasury and Interior departments with regard to enforcement of minimum wage provisions in Federal construction contracts are transferred to the Labor Department.

Authority to approve compromises in cases arising under the Federal Alcohol Administration Act are transferred from the Justice to the Treasury Department.

Functions of the Secretary of the Navy relating to State marine and nautical schools are transferred to the Maritime Commission.

The Soul Goes Hollywood Miami Girl Is 'Miss Spiritual' By Virtue of Vote Chicanery

Toledo, Ohio, Shares Glory, Or Publicity

(The choice of "Miss Spiritual of America" turned out to be a publicity stunt for Miami, Fla., and we fell for it. But we were up against just about the best publicity men in the world, and besides, the story had lots of pretty girls in it and it made good reading. — City editor's note.)

By Hope Ridings Miller

With no help from me, nor from the other two newspaper women who were quipped called judges yesterday, Miss Spiritual of America (Fern Hall) today is Miss Spiritual America.

We had fun, but virtually nothing to do with the contest. We filled in as stooges; cast our ballots as anxiously as if we had been electing a President of the United States, and stayed around long enough to find out that if we hadn't showed up at all, the outcome would have been the same.

The whole thing is a publicity stunt engineered by Steve Hannigan, the demon space grabber of Miami, Sun Valley, and other expensive spots. I was offered two weeks at the Roney-Plaza, Miami Beach, by one of Hannigan's bright young men to vote for Miss Miami. As it turned out he didn't need my vote at all.

Like a mammoth movie set was the stage in the Mayflower Garden Room yesterday at 2 p. m. when we three babes in the Hollywoods stepped up to take our places at the judges' table. On my right was Bab Lincoln. On my left was Evelyn Gordon. The Rev. R. Anderson Jardine, the chief stooge, stood between me and Bab Lincoln. On my right was Windsor and Wallis Warfield and fathered the idea of a selecting a new type of movie heroine, hoveed about us.

So did the Rev. James McMillan of the Hollywood Studio City, who seemed to be managing the works. Somewhere in the background was the rubicund H. J. Revier, Hollywood director, who came forward in time to vote in the first round, and finally to cast the only ballot that really counted.

Meanwhile, with none of the Miss Spirituals anywhere in sight, we received instructions. Nothing was said about spiritual qualities. But there was an outline of the screen-possibility points of each.

A nasty glance showed they added up pretty heavily in favor of Miss Spiritual Miami, whose home is Toledo, Ohio.

Qualifications for Miss Spiritual Washington, (Helen Burton, of Alexandria) and Miss Spiritual New York (Margaret Jamieson) were given slightly less enthusiastic ratings.

The Rev. Mr. McMillan got down to the business of explaining that six votes would be cast—one each from Miss Lincoln, Miss Gordon, Mrs. Miller, the Rev. Mr. Jardine, Revier and himself. In case of a deadlock, Revier was to have the deciding vote.

"And now will the contestants kindly step up to the table?" he asked.

They paraded, sat down, and smiled. We smiled back; looked them over; and asked a few questions.

Presently Miss Spiritual New York dramatically dropped out of the contest.

"I'm really not in it at all," she said, as she exuded glamour, oomph, or, sex-appeal by any other trade name.

"Yes, she's out," said the Rev. Mr. Jardine. "You see, her qualifications are not quite what we're looking for."

"What he means is I simply can't go into the finals as a girl who doesn't smoke or drink," she said. "I simply can't!"

Bab and Evelyn and I exchanged glances. What kind of a contest was this any way?

The box was passed. I followed directions, and cast my ballot for Miss Spiritual Washington. So did Evelyn and Bab. The two Reveries and Revier cast their votes.

"Now in case of a deadlock, Revier is to have the deciding vote," said the Rev. Mr. McMillan.

Ballofs were counted. Counted again, and then read aloud. Three were for Miss Spiritual Washington and three for Miss Spiritual Miami.

The Rev. Mr. Jardine looked as if he couldn't believe it. We three newspaper women really couldn't.

"Of course, both girls will have a role in the picture," said the Rev. Mr. McMillan. "But now, Mr. Revier, will you break the deadlock?"

Revier didn't pick Miss Miami, he said. "Well, I'll pick Miss Miami," he said.

Just like that.

If you think that was the end, you don't know your Hollywood heroine-choosing contests. The girl who had just become Miss Spiritual America burst into tears. Her sobbing resounded the length and breadth of the Mayflower garden.

Thus Miss Spiritual America began a career, which is calculated to take her to motion-picture fame by way of the Rev. Mr. Jardine's scenario, entitled "Indecency."

Slashed Naval Bill Is Sent To Senate Floor

Committee Restores Provision for Start On Super-Battleships

By John G. Norris Post Staff Writer

The Senate received a $663,797,478 naval supply bill yesterday, carrying funds for starting work on two 45,000-ton battleships, 17 other warships and 471 latest fighting planes.

As the Senate Appropriations Committee put its stamp of approval on the measure and sent it to the floor for action next week, naval officials rushed work on plans for the new craft so that keels can be laid soon after the funds become available July 1.

Two light cruisers of 10,000 tons, an aircraft carrier, 8 destroyers and 6 submarines will be started and work continued on 79 other warships with funds provided in the bill.

Large as the total was, the measure is still $123,514,099 under President Roosevelt's budget estimates and $1,981,980 below the amount allowed by the House.

Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, attempted to write into the bill a requirement that all of the $41,000,000 in cash and $25,000,000 contractual authority allowed for new planes be spent during the next fiscal year, but his motion was defeated, 10 to 7. The amendment, apparently designed to prevent the Navy from delaying its orders to give priority to foreign purchases, was opposed by Administration leaders.

Major changes made by the committee was the addition of $10,000,000 in contractual authority to permit orders to be placed for planes for the aircraft carrier Hornet, now building. The House had disapproved the item.

The committee failed to restore a $26,000,000 cut in the shipbuilding fund made in the House, but disagreed with a House recommendation that work on new battleships be suspended to await further data on the size of future battleships.

Chairman Byrnes said there was no sentiment in the committee for "super-dreadnaughts" of 65,000 to 80,000 tons, urged by some in the House.

Byrnes said the committee refused to restore funds carried in the budget for acquiring submarine nets and net-lying ships to guard major harbors. He declared members felt the navy should await results of British experiments.

Perilous School Invasion Traps D. C. Pastor's Son in Oslo

People Who Count Find Unaccountable Cases, One a Maniac

BENJAMIN MCCARTNEY

Dr. McCartney Says Experience Probably Will Prove Useful

The fact that Benjamin McCartney, 23, son of Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of Covenant First Presbyterian Church, is presumably in embattled Oslo doesn't worry his father.

"Doubtless," Dr. McCartney said last night, "he will put the experience to some good use."

A student at the University of Paris, McCartney flew to Oslo on Good Friday to visit student friends. His parents have received no word from him since a cablegram announced his arrival.

Young McCartney prepared at Mercersburg Academy and was graduated from Princeton in 1938. He studied at Grenoble University in southern France for a year, and last fall entered the University of Paris to study economics and languages with the aim of a career in journalism.

His experience in Norway at the present time will prove valuable in writing later, his father pointed out. "I don't know when he'll get back," Dr. McCartney said, "but he can certainly take care of himself and be of help there."

Last summer Dr. and Mrs. McCartney and their younger son, Noble, a sophomore at Princeton, toured most of the European countries with Benjamin as interpreter.

Census Takers Find Job Not All Arithmetic

People Who Count Find Unaccountable Cases, One a Maniac

Anyone who might harbor the delusion that census taking is a bed of roses, please take note:

One, enumerators, it was reported yesterday by Garnett R. Brown, area manager for the local census, was chased from the doorstep and forced to retreat for his life from a man waving a butcher knife.

A policeman luckily happened by and captured the knife-waver. It did the already jolted census enumerator no good to learn that the man in custody had recently been an inmate of a hospital for the insane.

Brown said he believed the 450 enumerators yesterday had passed the halfway mark in their job, with everything, on the whole, going along smoothly. Record thus far has been 180 names recorded by a single enumerator in one day. Each gets 5 cents a name and is required to put in eight hours daily, but some work 12 to 15.

Enumerator Francis Deak, 218 Vine street northwest, yesterday had a less terrifying experience than his colleague who was chased by a man with a knife. Deak entered an apartment where he found a group of women painting chairs and said he was asked to paint three chairs before the ladies would agree to answer his questions. He did.

Something of a record was achieved by Enumerator John A. Keller, 1330 Massachusetts avenue northwest, who ran across a colored family of mother and 24 children, all living under one roof.

Germans Moved 220
Miles in Day, Says
General in Charge

By Louis P. Lochner
Associated Press Staff Writer

Copenhagen, April 11.—The German commander of the army of occupation in Denmark told me today that "considerably more" than an army corps (45,000 to 75,000 troops) carried out the invasion of this country with such precision that only one German soldier was killed and ten wounded.

The Danish casualties were ten killed and several wounded, he said. After being flown here from Berlin in German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop's private plane, I interviewed Gen. Leonard Kaupisch, who made a name for himself in this war as commander of German forces in the Polish Corridor.

"I found him, smiling pleasant and coolly, though determined looking, settled ironically enough in headquarters at the Hotel Angletterre (England) favorite hostelry of Englishmen in this country."

Danes Foresaw Invasion, Says Skating Star

EMMY ANDERSEN

Expected Blow Since Last Spring, Asserts
Emmy Andersen

Miss Emmy Andersen, Denmark's woman professional figure-skating champion, said here yesterday the invasion of Denmark was expected last spring.

Several people told her "of the finding of a document" revealing that Denmark would be under German domination in 1941. Miss Andersen did not know where the document was found.

"But everyone was apprehensive, naturally," she said. "Now, I have just arrived in Washington after a skating season in New York, and I have read with horror in The Post that Denmark has been invaded by German troops."

She went to the Danish Legation yesterday to inquire how she might bring her sister out of Copenhagen to America.

There she was told, she said, that it would be impossible at the present for anyone to get into Denmark or out. Her sister lives in Copenhagen.

Italy Reported Planning to Call More to Colors

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, April 11.—In foreign circles there is a rumor tonight that Italy will call up new classes, perhaps tomorrow. However, there is no reason to suppose that Italy is going to abandon her nonbelligerency.

Although the press still champions the German thesis and is writing about great German victories, Norway's resistance and the powerful action of the British navy have made a profound impression here.

Rumors about the Balkans and the Danube Basin are still alarming. Yesterday, there was not only tension in southeastern Europe; there was hysteria. Today the tension remains but the belief is gaining ground that the Balkans may remain quiet for a while.

Italians believe that so long as the theater of war remains in northwestern Europe, the southeast will be safe, but at the same time they feel sure that its turn is coming next.

Virginio Gayda, in the Giornale d'Italia, today continues his presentation of the German thesis. The initiative, he says, remains in the hands of Germany. The Germans' feat in Scandinavia is a great victory, whatever their losses may be. "It has been a hard blow for British naval tradition, for the prestige of the imperial democracies and for their war aims," is his conclusion.

Experts Say Allies Must Land in Norway

Expeditionary Force Described as Political, Military Necessity

By Edward T. Follard

For Britain and France to send an expeditionary force to Norway would be an extremely hazardous undertaking, but send one they must, in the opinion of military men here.

The Allies, these experts said yesterday, must try to make a landing in Norway both for military and political reasons.

Germany, with the west coast of Norway in her possession, it was pointed out, would acquire air and submarine bases that would make it much easier for her to strike at Britain.

Looking at it from a political standpoint, the experts here said that for the Allies to let Norway go down by default would be a terrific blow to their prestige, and would have important consequences both abroad and at home.

Losses Must Be Risked

Landing troops on hostile shores is the most difficult of all military operations, and the Allies might suffer heavy losses in trying to get their forces on Norway's rocky seacoast. But losses and the possibility of failure, it was emphasized, have to be risked.

Bergen was mentioned as one likely landing spot for the expected Allied expedition. Reports have been coming out of Sweden that the Norwegians "recaptured" this port, but these have not been confirmed.

Assuming that the landing place was held by the Germans, naval men said that the Allies might use "heavy stuff"—battleships and battle cruisers—to bombard it, after reconnaissance planes had provided them with a picture of the problem involved.

Why Did Allies Wait?

The troop ships, they said, would move in behind a screen of destroyers, and the Allies might use submarines, probably would be employed to rush the inevitable German machine gunners.

Military and naval men find it hard to believe that the Allies were caught napping by the German flash move against Norway. British intelligence agents, they say, must almost certainly have known that German naval vessels and troop ships were moving up the Norwegian coast.

Why then, it was asked, did the Allies wait? Was it on the theory that Germany was over-extending her line and making herself vulnerable? Some here believed that this might be the case, and their belief was strengthened by the seeming glee with which some of the Allied leaders commented on the German move.

Paris Prepares Maginot Attack

try, while invasion of Belgium or Luxembourg would automatically bring Allied assistance.

The same holds good for Switzerland. It is no secret that for this purpose the Allies have in reserve a very powerful mass of maneuver with adequate mechanized equipment ready to move in any direction at an instant's notice.

Reports from the front reflect the great determination of the troops, elated by news of the successes won by the Allied fleet in Scandinavian waters. Not that the enemy is undaunted. It is fully expected that the onslaught will be savage and that a new type of giant tank may come into action, while airplanes drop a hail of projectiles.

But all these contingencies have been foreseen, as this correspondent has had occasion to ascertain on the spot. In France, both at the front and at the rear, there is every confidence in the strength of the Maginot Line and in the troops manning it.

So far as the present front is concerned, it is assumed that the German attack would concentrate on the sector between the Moselle and the Saar Rivers, as well as on the region north of Bitch, in an endeavor to take important outworks of the Maginot position, possession of which would facilitate further progress. It is conceivable that operations against the former would include passage of German troops through Luxembourg.

With regard to the second sector, it is noteworthy that this evening's French communiqué mentions artillery fire there today, which was "vigorously returned." The morning communiqué reported that it had been a quiet night and that French fighters had brought down two enemy reconnaissance planes.

During the day War Minister Edouard Daladier conferred in Paris with a number of military leaders, including Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, who is in supreme command of all French armed forces; Gen. Maxime Weygand, who commands the army of the Orient; Gen. Alphonse George, who commands all the land forces, and Gen. Joseph Vuillemin, commander of the air force.

Strict anonymity is the rule in the French army and the names of commanders of army groups and armies are not given to the public. It is interesting to note, therefore, that this week the censor has permitted publication of photographs of Gen. Andre Gaston Pretelat.

Nazi Fleet Crippled, Churchill Declares; Naval Battle for Trondheim Reported Raging strength. "A number of destroyers" (one is known to have been torpedoed at Narvik).

"Several U-boats (one destroyed by H. M. S. Zulu, mentioned specifically).

"Nearly a dozen" troop and supply ships, sunk or captured in the Skaggerak and Kattegat gateways to the Baltic, in the North Sea or in the Norwegian ore port of Narvik.

Scharnhorst Damaged

Damaged: The battleship Scharnhorst, British losses:

Destroyer Glowworm, sunk by two German destroyers.

Destroyer Gurkha, sunk by aerial bombs.

Destroyers Hunter and Hardy, lost in battle of Narvik Wednesday.

Churchill did not mention these, but the admiralty has conceded their loss.

Damaged: Battleship Rodney, battlecruiser Renown, cruiser Aurora, and at least two destroyers.

Today Germany broadcast a claim that its bombers had badly damaged a British aircraft carrier in the North Sea and that two more British destroyers, or a total of six, had been sunk at Narvik.

Standing against this, unconfirmed here, were radio reports that a naval battle between German and British fleet units was raging at Trondheim, Norway; that German transports forced aground during last night's battle in the Skaggerak.

were blazing fiercely; that 1,000 bodies were floating in the waters off Sweden, from as many as six sunken German transports. These reports likewise were not confirmed here.

Neutral naval sources said tonight that four Nazi cruisers alone would have carried 2,250 men, and estimated that total German casualties might well exceed 5,000.

On the other hand, British casualties were thought to be well below 1,000. When the Gurkha was sunk, for instance, all but 14 men were rescued.

Churchill's hour-long statement, packed with proud accounts of British sea glories, among them the fight of the Renown and the Scharnhorst, also told the world:

"That the might, 33,900-ton Rodney, flagship of the home fleet, although hit by a heavy bomb, suffered but little loss and seven casualties and is in line of battle tonight."

"That the navy has occupied the Faroe Islands, about 250 miles north of the British naval base of Scapa Flow, and will give them back to Denmark when that nation is freed from its 'foul thralldom.'"

"That 'we shall take what we want' of Norway's coast when the fleet has accomplished its foremost object—total destruction of Nazi sea power."

Air Force Hits Back

That the fleet's own planes, "the fleet air arm," launching flying torpedoes, and planes of the R. A. F. have returned Nazi air offensives "blow for blow," after five German bomb attacks on the British battle fleet which Churchill admitted the Nazis pressed with "courage." Twelve royal air force planes, the first lord said, attacked two German light cruisers in Bergen Harbor, hit one and "we have not seen anything of her since."

A second foray, carried out by sixteen naval planes in Bergen Roadstead, resulted in three hits on German war vessels and later, scout planes skimming over the scene of attack found only a long streak of oil on the surface.

Other fleet air arm units smashed at German warcraft in Trondheim Harbor with aerial torpedoes.

That Norway's defenders are capable of "vigorous and prolonged resistance" to the Germans, although their country and Denmark have "drawn the unlucky numbers in this sinister lottery" of "long and elaborate" preparation by Hitler.

The Queen Mary At Halifax To Take Canadian Troops

By International News Service

The mammoth British liner Queen Mary is at Halifax, Nova Scotia, fitted as a transport to take Canadian troops to Europe or the Near East, the news-letter, the Hemisphere, reported yesterday.

The vessel, second largest afloat, has been variously reported en route to England, Australia and New Zealand since its departure from New York March 21.

Sea Fight Still Rages Off Norway as World Seeks Details

Five attacks were pressed home on the cruiser Aurora—pressed, it is agreed, with great courage in the face of heavy antiaircraft fire. All failed to damage the cruiser but the destroyer Gurkha, in its company, was heavily hit.

It developed a bad list and sank in 4½ hours. All but 14 of the crew were saved and were landed with 70 prisoners from an unnamed ship today. It was said the Gurkha fought with her guns until she sank.

Renown Sights Foo

Meanwhile other events were happening Tuesday. That afternoon the Zulu, one of the Gurkha's sister ships, sank a submarine off the Orkneys. And that morning, far to the north off Narvik, the great battle cruiser Renown, one of the five heaviest and fastest ships engaged in this war, was plunging through snow squalls with heavy seas breaking over her bows when she sighted two German ships—the Scharnhorst, 28,000 tons, one of the twin prizes of the German fleet, accompanied by a 10,000-ton Hipper class cruiser.

The Renown, pitching and tossing with the snow veiling her sights, opened fire at 18,000 yards. She fired for three minutes before the Scharnhorst replied and simultaneously turned away. After nine minutes the Renown observed a hit on the enemy's forward structure. Then the Scharnhorst stopped firing for a moment and resumed again after the after turret, presumably by local control.

The Scharnhorst fled and the Renown pushed at 24 knots to follow her, leaving her escorting destroyers behind in the bucking sea. During this period a German shell passed clean through the Renown above the water line without exploding. A similar happening was noted on the Exeter in the battle of the River Plate. At this period a vertical column of smoke from the Scharnhorst made the Renown's crew think they had scored again.

The cruiser now swung across the wake of the flying Germans and laid a smoke screen. Both ships retired at the highest speed. The Renown fired on both. The German cruiser swung from time to time to fire a broadside.

The firing grew intermittent as the chase continued and owing to the weather it finally stopped when the Germans were last seen at 29,000 yards. In addition a shell hit and damaged the Renown's foremast, carrying away part of the main aerial but did not explode. There were no British casualties.

The Attack at Narvik

That same Tuesday evening came an attack by five British destroyers on six heavier German destroyers and several storehips which had carried out a landing at Narvik and were lying at anchor in Narvik Fjord.

So dangerous did the admiralty deem this operation that the leader of the British flotilla, Capt. B. A. W. Warburton-Lee, was told to use his own judgment with the assurance that the admiralty would back him up whatever he did. He chose to attack, lost two of his command and heavily damaged the enemy destroyers and blew up storeships—the real object of the raid. On the way out the remaining three British destroyers, one heavily damaged, blew up a German ammunition ship.

So much for Tuesday.

On Wednesday, the action continued over a wide area. Two waves of air force bombers, 12 in each, went after German ships lying at anchor in Bergen Fjord as cover for a landing party. One of two light cruisers there was hit and reconnaissance has shown no sign of her since.

At dusk the fleet air arm, flying old Skuas, tried the same trick, 16 of them attacking the other cruiser. Reconnaissance planes later reported this cruiser had vanished, too, and that a mile-long slick of oil could be seen. The fleet air arm dived down in succession of three, dropping 500-pound bombs at the lowest point. Three hits were scored and one Skua was lost.

On Thursday the fleet air arm launched another modern attack when torpedo-carrying planes raided German vessels in the harbor of Trondheim. A Hipper class cruiser was reported to be there but she had vanished. British planes bagged a destroyer.

That brings to an end the formal account of the navy's recent activities. It is not a full list. It is known that in addition to these activities British and French submarines have been patrolling the Kattegat. A number of German transports and storeships moving to Norway were sunk or captured. Additional destroyers have been sent to the bottom.

British, French and Polish forces are patrolling the mouths of fjords where German landings have been effected, having established a blockade. A dispersed and diffused sea campaign is proceeding even if the big ships are perhaps taking a brief rest.

The possibility that British forces have attempted to crash into the Baltic is being discussed. It is not regarded likely, however. So far as is known, there has been no attempt on the Allied part to land forces and bombard cities in German hands, despite prevalent reports. It is, of course, possible that such operations are either taking place or are planned, but it would not seem as likely as a purely naval operation.

The summary of air force activity issued today showed that since Sunday air force units have destroyed 19 German planes with loss to themselves of two flying boats, one reconnaissance machine and three bombers. No fighters were lost.

Saved Norway Just in Time, Nazis Assert

Promise Revelations; British Plane Carrier Damaged, Berlin Says

Agency reported that German bombers badly damaged a British airplane carrier late this afternoon in the North Sea, and that two more British destroyers had been destroyed yesterday at Narvik, northern Norway.

Except for these reports Germans closed their lips tightly concerning naval and air actions in the Skagerrak, the Kattegat and the North Sea.

DNB reported in a special bulletin that the German army at Bergen, Norway, had captured five British ships loaded with war supplies, including cannon, machine-guns and munitions.

"If German troops had not gone up there in the nick of time and the British forces," the DNB said, "the English would be there now and Germany would be worrying about the defense of her northern border."

The British ships were sent to Bergen ahead of time, DNB said, under the guise of "aid for Finland." The agency asserted the supplies were to have been used by a British expeditionary force which was supposed to occupy Bergen.

Germans also said that soldiers who occupied Oslo found 50 new American Curtiss planes which they said would be studied closely for any possible information on construction.

(American sources said between 30 and 50 Curtiss pursuit planes were shipped to Norway in the last few weeks for the Norwegian air force but were of an old design.)

(Britain has acknowledged the loss of four destroyers in naval war since the beginning of the week, two of them at Narvik.)

Moving Troops, Nazis Say
Amid the reluctance to say much on actions at sea and in the skies the Germans nevertheless declared that additional German soldiers were being transported to Norway in a movement they insisted was being carried out without hindrance by the enemy.

(Swedish reports on the contrary said six or eight German transports had been sunk in the Skagerrak and one had fled into a Swedish harbor but had been turned away.)

In the campaign to pacify Norway, D. N. B. reported that "several" Norwegian battalions were alarmed in a sudden German attack on Elverum, where King Haakon previously had taken temporary refuge. The agency said the German attack started from Hamar but did not say whether the Germans remained.

(Norwegian quarters subsequently claimed the capture of Hamar. Radio advisers to Stockholm from the Norwegian commander of Bergen also reported the capture of that seaport by the Norwegians and further that Norwegians were massing for a drive on German-held Trondheim, up the coast from Bergen.)

"German positions throughout Norway are so thoroughly consolidated," authorized sources said today, "that there is not the remotest possibility they could be dislodged by English and French forces."

Following the report of the capture of British ships loaded with war materials in Bergen Harbor, authorized quarters hinted there soon would be an expose of "full details of an English plan to convert Scandinavia into a theater of war."

The laying of mines in neutral Norwegian waters, it was charged, was undertaken with the knowledge of at least some Norwegian authorities. (Britain announced Monday she had laid mines in three zones along the Norwegian coast to block the "corridor" being used by German vessels to carry ore to Germany from Narvik.)

300,000 Nazi Troops Reported Ready To Back Warning to Balkans on Trade

By the Associated Press

Bucharest (Friday), April 12.—Germany has notified southeastern European nations that any country moving to switch trade from the Reich to the Allies will be considered "unneutral," it was reported reliably in southeastern European capitals early today.

A German news bulletin issued in the same capital also stated the Nazis had reached a full understanding with the Danubian nations, particularly Rumania, that "river shipping will be safeguarded with all means."

The Reich has demanded the right to send its gunboats down the river to protect transport of oil and wheat against "British sabotage."

The German notification concerning a switch in trade was given weight by the reported presence of more than 100,000 German "lightning" troops near the Hungarian frontier, and nearly 200,000 more at Krakow, in conquered Poland.

In addition, it was reported here, without confirmation, that Russia had concentrated troops at Odessa, only 25 miles from Rumania's eastern border.

Adding to the accumulation of alarm along the Danube caused by these developments and the Scandinavian invasion was the murder of a German girl and a German munitions expert, reportedly by "the agent of another foreign power."

It was feared international ramifications of the crime would increase Balkan tension.

Scattering of leaflets from speeding automobiles in the streets of Belgrade last night in which Yugoslavia were warned, "Do not resist Germany if you value your freedom," also contributed to the jitters. Many persons were arrested, but released.

It was generally admitted that

Partial Text of Churchill's Report on Britain's Naval Blitzkrieg

London, April 11 (AP)—The partial text of the statement made in the House of Commons today by Winston Churchill follows:

I am sure I shall receive the indulgence of the House if there should be any chance, be any minor error in fact or detail in the statement, I am going to make, or if it had not received that thorough and prolonged preparation which I have always endeavored to give to any observations I have ventured to address to the House.

We are working under very sharp pressure at the present time but I have been anxious to give the House the fullest possible information agreeable with the public interests.

The situation in the last few weeks was violently broken on Monday morning by the German invasion of Norway and Denmark which had been long and elaborately prepared and was actually set in motion in the last week of March.

For several months past we have received information of large numbers of German merchant ships being fitted as transports and numerous small vessels being assembled in various Baltic ports and along the river mouths of the Elbe but no one could tell when they would be used or against what possible enemies they would be used. Holland, Denmark, Norway, and Sweden all were as it seemed liable to a sudden, brutal, capricious, and in any case, unprovoked attack.

All Threatened
Which would be selected as the first victim or where the blow would strike remained inevitably a matter of pure speculation. The Nazi German Government is accustomed to spread through these channels a continuous flow of rumors.

These are put forth by all their agents in neutral countries, by hangers-on in the legations and embassies and other sympathizers and backers wherever they may be found.

My remarks have no particular personal applications, but all these countries had been threatened, and as the German Government are not restrained by lies and as they have an obvious preference for striking at the weak rather than the strong, all the small countries on their borders were and still are in a high state of alarm.

Even those neutrals who have done the most to placate Germany and were the greatest aid to her could not feel any sense of security that they would not be attacked without any reason and without any warning and swiftly overrun and reduced to bondage and pillage of their property and especially of all estates.

In all those most unfortunate countries not one of them could tell which would be the next to be devoured.

A Sinister Lottery
In the small hours of Monday morning we learned that Norway and Denmark had drawn the unlucky numbers in this sinister lottery. Dealers of goods had special reasons for apprehension, not only because she was the nearest and weakest of Germany's neighbors, but because she had recent treaties with Germany which guaranteed her from all molestation, and because she was engaged in active commerce both with Germany and Great Britain, the continuance of which in time of war had been foreseen by German and Danish governments.

This obviously placed her in a position of peculiar danger. The extraordinary configuration of the Norwegian western coast provides a kind of corridor or covered way, as everyone knows, through which neutral trade and German ships of all kinds—warships and others—could move to and fro through the allied blockade into the territorial waters of Norway and Sweden until they came under the effective protection of the German home air forces in North Germany.

They could go to and fro along this route without molestation. Existence of this geographical and legal covered way has been the greatest disadvantage which we have suffered and the greatest advantage which Germany possessed in her efforts to frustrate the allied blockade. Warships moved up and down it as they thought convenient. U-boats used it as they thought fit. Stray German liners and merchant ships tried to get back to Germany from outer seas followed this route, which is over 800 miles long and can be entered or quitted at any convenient point.

There has been no greater impediment to the blockade of Germany than this Norwegian corridor. It was so in the last war and has been so in this war. The British navy has been forced to watch an endless procession of German and neutral ships carrying contraband to and from Germany which at any moment it could have stopped.

Mined in Last War
During the last war, when we were associated with the United States, the Allies felt themselves so deeply prejudiced by this covered way, then being chiefly used by U-boats setting out on their marauding expeditions, that the British, French and United States governments together induced the Norwegians to lay a mine field across their territorial waters and across the covered way in order to prevent the use by U-boats of this channel.

It was only natural that the admiralty, since war began, should have brought this precedent to the notice of the government and should have urged that use be allowed to lay a mine field of our own in Norwegian territorial waters in order to compel this traffic, which was passing in and out to Germany, to go out into the open sea to take its chance of being brought under contraband control or captured as enemy prizes by our blockading squadrons and flotillas.

Gradually as this cruel, deadly war deepened and darkened, the feeling grew that it was placing an undue burden on the Allies to allow this traffic to continue. It was intolerable to watch week after week ships passing down this corridor carrying iron ore to make shells which will strike down the young men of France and Britain in the campaign of 1941.

It therefore was decided at last—and scruples have caused us injury at the same time as they do us honor—to interrupt this traffic and make it come out into the open seas. Every precaution was taken to avoid the slightest damage to neutral ships or any loss of life even of enemy merchant ships by the mine fields which were laid and declared Monday last at dawn.

I now address myself to the question I believe has been asked in some quarters—what is the Navy doing?

When on Sunday night the news was received from our reconnaissance over the whole of the North Sea that German battle cruisers with a number of other cruisers and vessels and destroyers were at sea and moving northward, the commander in chief put to sea to find them and bring them to action.

Avoided Norse Navy
At the same time independent of this a strong British naval force was approaching Narvik in order to lay a mine field off the Norwegian coast. The mine field was laid according to plan at daylight on Monday night. The task of minelaying was accomplished and they withdrew in order to avoid the risk of any collision with Norwegian war vessels.

One of the destroyers of this northern force that went to lay mines lost a man overboard on Sunday afternoon and stayed behind some time to pick him up. This destroyer, the Glowworm, was proceeding northward to rejoin its force when at 8 o'clock on Monday morning she saw first one and then two enemy destroyers, which she engaged. She then reported an unknown enemy before her to the northward.

These incidents came to us by one at a few minutes intervals as they occurred, but the last message ended abruptly and we can only conclude that the Glowworm has been sunk by greatly superior forces of the enemy while she was engaged. Since then fighting has been continued night and day without stop.

It is going on now—a widely dispersed but nonetheless general action between a large number of German ships and aircraft and such forces as we are able to have there.

During Monday morning it looked as if the enemy forces which sank the Glowworm would be caught between our forces, but they got away.

On Tuesday the fleet was cruising to the south about the level of Bergen when during the afternoon it was attacked continuously by German aircraft.

Two Cruisers Hit
Two cruisers were slightly damaged by air missiles, but that did not interfere at all with their work and they are still with the fleet.

One very heavy bomb hit the flagship Rodney, but her very strong deck armor resisted the impact successfully. So far as the structure of our men of war is concerned, this must be considered satisfactory.

The cruiser Aurora, which has joined the fleet, was subjected to five diving bombing attacks which were pressed with courage but which all failed. The destroyer Gurkha, which was escorting the Aurora, was hit. She listed very heavily and sank after four or five hours. But almost all of her crew were rescued.

The same afternoon the destroyer Zulu sank a German U-boat off the Orkneys.

Meanwhile, far to the north off Narvik at daylight on Tuesday morning, one of our battle cruisers, perceived Scharnhorst, and a 10,000-ton Hipper class cruiser which had evidently gone up with the force the day before.

They were seen in the distance dimly amidst snowstorms of a tempestuous day. The sea was running very high and gales were blowing furiously, but our battle cruiser opened at 18,000 yards and after three minutes the enemy replied. The enemy almost immediately turned away and after nine minutes the Renown observed his forward of the superstructure of the German battle cruiser.

The Scharnhorst Flees
Thereafter her whole armory stopped firing, but later after having turned she began firing under local control. The speed which the battle cruiser maintained was very great and Renown had to push to 24 knots through very heavy seas breaking over her forward gun turrets and after a further two minutes of firing a vertical column of smoke from what they called a possible second hit was observed in Scharnhorst, who then turned away and retired at high speed without hampering herself by further firing.

During this period a shell passed through our vessel about the waterline without bursting. A second shell went through the foremast and carried away the main aerial. There were no casualties in Renown.

The 10,000-ton cruiser of the Hipper class now tried to cross Scharnhorst. Hipper threw a smoke screen to cover Scharnhorst and Renown opened fire upon Hipper, which turned away and both ships retired at high speed. Hipper dodging the fire which became intermittent.

You must imagine that all the time snowstorms were closing the view and the sea was running very high. In the end we must regret to have to say that they succeeded in leaving us.

Now still on Tuesday night we gave orders to our destroyers blockading West Fjord, a great stretch of water 60 miles long leading up to Narvik, to attack the enemy which had got in there.

There were six destroyers and U-boats reported and moreover it was expected that the Germans had landed a certain number of guns during the time they had been there. They were very quick in landing there and making themselves fast.

Capt. Warburton Lee with five destroyers attacked six of the latest enemy destroyers and such guns as they could have landed on shore in the interval.

Coming to a fierce fight in Narvik Fjord there were combatants knocked out on each side in fierce fighting worthy of any in records which are preserved and treated with respect in the long history of the navy.

Munitions Ship Sunk
What we aimed at was the destruction of store ships as well as the crippling of the enemy forces. On the way back we are told two destroyers who were escorting their wounded comrades out of the fjord unpursued by the enemy met the Ravensfield full of reserve ammunition with which I suppose it was intended to turn Narvik into a kind of Gibraltar. At any rate, this ship was blown up and we must regard this as simplifying our task.

Now I come to Wednesday. Here a very determined attack was made by three waves of the Royal Air Force who flew in every direction for reconnaissance for attack and for protection of the navy. Two waves of the R. A. F. of 12 planes each attacked two German cruisers in Bergen Fjord which were covering German troops who were landed there. One of these light cruisers was hit and we have not seen anything of her since.

On Wednesday at dusk the fleet air arm came back on to the scene for the first time in this war when 16 aircraft which are perhaps not of the latest pattern flew from the Orkneys and attacked the remaining cruiser in Bergen, which was moored alongside. They attacked in succession of three, making low bombing dives and casting 500-pound bombs at the lowest point.

They scored three hits and out 16 is returned. A little later when reconnaissance aircraft were sent over no cruiser was seen. Where this one had been lying a streak of oil about a mile long was seen on the surface of the harbor as if the result had been obtained.

Today at daylight torpedo-carrying aircraft of the fleet air arm, 18 in number, have attacked enemy shipping in the harbor at Trondheim. We had hoped to catch a Hipper class cruiser which was reported to be there. She had, however, levanted in the night and all we could get was a destroyer, which was hit by a torpedo.

Britain, U. S. Keep Shanghai Majority

Shanghai, April 11 (AP)—A solid bloc of American and British votes in Shanghai's annual municipal council elections today defeated Japan's most determined political bid to end Britain's 98-year domination of the International Settlement.

Final returns of the election gave the British five council seats and the Americans and Japanese two each.

poration. Men up to 45 years of age went into the ranks on this order.

I saw troops well equipped with rifles and automatic arms yesterday but they had no artillery. An officer told me they already had marched 40 miles in one day across steep mountains covered with snowdrifts 2 and 3 feet deep. They were en route to the mountains in the neighborhood of Narvik.

Refugees Also Hunger

The small villages surrounding Narvik are full of evacuees and the food shortage there is terrible. An appeal has been made to Sweden for supplies.

A train manned by ten German soldiers was allowed to pass through the Norwegian lines last night to evacuate the last foreigners in Narvik.

Swedish military authorities here denied officially today, as did customs authorities, that Swedish troops had crossed the frontier toward Narvik. However, the entire region on the Swedish side of the frontier is now patrolled by Swedish planes and troops.

Announcement that the Norwegian government has ordered the arrest of Col. Sundlo, commander of the Port of Narvik, on charges that he helped the Germans seize the port and refused to let his troops fire on the Nazis, enables me to tell the inside story of the part the Norwegian commander played in the invasion.

Friend of Blomberg
Sundlo, a personal friend of Gen. Werner von Blomberg, former German war minister who was Sundlo's guest in Narvik in 1935, is well known as a Norwegian Nazi.

I remember clearly the amazement neutral correspondents and many Norwegians expressed Monday night when the radio at 10 p. m. announced that the German fleet was on its way up the coast, and later upon the discovery of the arrival of troop transports, that no orders were given for defense of the town.

Moreover, the loss of two Norwegian warships with over 350 lives can be placed indirectly upon Sundlo.

The warships were ordered, as Commander Askim of the battleship Norge told me Saturday, to be auxiliary of the land forces at Narvik.

Warships Kept Moored
Hence, they should have been sent on alarms given Monday night into Ofoten Fjord, where the warships could have maneuvered to intercept the Germans.

Probably to save the invaders, they were ordered to stay moored. It was fortunate on Monday morning that the naval commander at Tromsø ordered two submarines, also stationed at Narvik, to depart for an unknown destination or they would have been taken or sunk.

As I pointed out in a dispatch last Sunday, the British merchantmen alone in the harbor had sufficient armament to repel any invasion if warned while the ships were still in the fjord.

This was what was in Narvik thought was happening when we heard gunfire Tuesday morning. Instead, Norwegian sailors were trapped and their ships hit by German shells before they could begin fighting.

Troops Ordered to Retreat
Commander Askim was pulled from the water after his ship was sunk and was revived in a hospital by a German doctor who told me he believed Askim's life could be saved. Some day perhaps Askim can tell the whole story.

A well-divided force, supported by accurately aimed artillery could have held Narvik, but the troops were ordered to give way and not fire. Once the center of the town was controlled and the main highway and railroad bridge and station were in German hands further resistance was useless.

I can also reveal that the Norwegian government had taken steps the night before the attack to send special troops to the village from Malmødal, the military base attached to the fjord. The troops spent all night sailing across to Narvik and then raced the Germans to the center of the town. Through Sundlo's action these troops lost their chance and had no choice but to withdraw behind the town. I talked with their commander, Umdahl, who stayed cool and calm and directed his men with skill and courage. He now has been made commander of the region by the Norwegian government.

I also talked with officers inside Narvik who admitted a good chance of repelling the invaders had been lost at the start.

It seemed incredible to us that the Germans had such perfect information of the location of ships and defense points in the port as they steamed in, firing.

Sundlo's action seems to be an explanation of why the well armed units in the hills dominating the harbor never opened fire.

When I first arrived in Narvik, soldiers and civilians told me about Sundlo and there was universal distrust of him.

The original versions of Narvik's fall must now be revised and laid down to a combination of surprise and assistance from the inside.

Nazis Claim Cooperation
[The official German radio, in a broadcast picked up by CBS in New York last night, said that a "good understanding" had been reached with the Norwegian commander at Oslo and that the commander had stated he would use Oslo's anti-aircraft guns against Allied planes if they should attack the city.]

"[Calvin] prevails in Norway," said the radio announcement. "Particularly noteworthy is the good understanding arrived at with the commander of Oslo, who has declared himself prepared to use the Norwegian defense weapons, including anti-aircraft batteries, in the event that British or French planes were sighted over the Norwegian capital."

"[So far, all enemy air attacks have been ineffective and have been repulsed with losses for the enemy, just as the attacks of enemy naval units ended in failure.]"

By Thomas F. Hawkins
Associated Press Staff Writer
Stockholm, April 11.—Norwegian Minute Men—armed with nothing more than shotguns—tonight joined the nation's defense little army of regulars in dogged resistance to German invaders, dislodging them. It was reported, from the strategic port of Bergen and throwing them back in an attack on Elverum, the temporary capital.

Overlaid workers, untrained peasants, rifle club members and military school cadets responded to the government's call to join the British-French Allies against the Nazis. They hastily fortified every possible defense point not in German hands.

A late afternoon radio report from the Norwegian commander at Bergen said his forces had retaken the city from the invaders and were massing for an attempt to recapture Trondheim, farther up the west coast.

Subsequent advice reaching Stockholm said Bergen was in Norwegian hands, but that the fortresses at the entrance of the harbor still were held by the Germans.

The Bergen commander reported the invaders were massing their forces around Trondheim.

[The United Press reported from Stockholm that a sea battle between British and German warships and planes was being fought outside Trondheim Fjord on Norway's west coast north of Bergen, according to the Swedish radio.]

The radio, crediting its account to a message from the Aliesund radio, said British planes were involved in the sea fight.

[Earlier the Swedish radio had reported that British planes had attacked German naval units in Trondheim Fjord.]

From the north, Norwegian troops were advancing southward in the hope of cutting off German troops operating between Trondheim and the Swedish border.

German planes circled over Kongsvinger, 20 miles from the border, during the day and dropped light bombs.

The Norwegians were reported methodically blasting bridges to make German advances difficult and to cut off Nazi forces already in possession of Norwegian territory.

An announcement by the Norwegian government said the German troops, trying to fight their way toward Elverum, where King Haakon and Premier Nygaardsvold are in constant consultation, had been turned back at Eldvold, about halfway up the rail line from Oslo.

Between Elverum and Hamar, 80 miles north of Oslo and the place to which the Norwegian government first fled, a contingent of German troops was repulsed by a civilian army manning machine guns at highway barricades.

Norwegians said the Germans, commanded by the former aviation attaché of the German legation in Oslo, were bent on capturing Parliament and cabinet.

Advices received here said the German commander was killed along with many of his troops and that only two were wounded among the defenders.

Narvik Recapture Reported
The Norwegian government said Oslo's outer fortresses still were in Norwegian hands. This was borne out by reports of continued heavy firing against Germans in Oslo Fjord.

A German soldier taken captive in the fighting south of Elverum declared that the German troops were ordered to take King Haakon and members of the government prisoners and bring them to Oslo. He said the Nazis calculated they would have no opposition at Elverum and the Norwegian fire so surprised them that many Germans were killed before they could take cover.

A Swedish traveler who drove a car from Hamar declared the railway station there was in flames and the town had been damaged severely.

Another traveler from Norway brought a report that the Germans had retired 30 miles south of Hamar. The inhabitants of Elverum, he said, expected the town would be bombed since the German ultimatum delivered by the German envoy Wednesday evening was ignored, but nothing happened. (A later dispatch said army headquarters was bombed, but did not give location of the headquarters.)

Another report reaching here was that the police chief of Oslo, by the order of the German military commander, confiscated private automobiles and gasoline.

The afternoon newspaper Aftenbladet reported that German troops in Norway were reinforced by planes from new Danish bases.

Late in the afternoon there were few reports out of Norway but Swedish observers expressed the view that the German invasion seemed stopped, at least at most points. The Norwegians were blocking all highways ahead of the Germans.

FALSE TEETH

Need Not Embarrass
Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plates dropped, slipped or wobbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little PASTETEX, the alkaline (not acid) powder, on your plates. Holds false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). "I WAS determined to have a clear skin. Someone told me of S.S.S. ... now I am happy ... I found the way to build from within."

Everyone wants to win and hold friends. Whatever local treatment you use for your complexion ... remember skin health—natural glow—is dependent on the full strength of red blood. Pale skin, quick fatigue, a general run-down condition, underweight (in the absence of an organic trouble or focal infection) may be due to (1) lack of assimilation of food (2) weakened blood. This is also true after middle life. For generations S.S.S., a blood tonic and stomachic, has been helping people gain new strength ... better health ... more happiness.

S.S.S. record of accomplishment warrants your giving it a good trial. Why not start taking it today. You will soon observe improvement and will be happy with the results obtained. The larger size represents savings in the purchase price. S.S.S. Co.

Text of Roosevelt's 4th Reorganization Plan

Text of President Roosevelt's Reorganization Plan No. IV:

Sec. 1. Transfer of dominion customs receivership.—The functions of a division of territories and island possessions in the Department of the Interior relating to the dominion customs receivership are transferred to the Department of State and shall be administered by the Secretary of State or under his direction and supervision by such agency in the Department of State as he shall designate.

Department of the Treasury

Sec. 2. Approval of compromises.—The functions of the Attorney General relating to the approval of compromises made in accordance with the provisions of section 7 of the Federal Alcohol Administration Act are transferred to the Secretary of the Treasury, to be exercised by him or under his direction and supervision by such officer in the Department of the Treasury as he shall designate. Provided, that exclusive jurisdiction to compromise cases arising under the Federal Alcohol Administration Act which are pending before the courts or which have been or may hereafter be referred to the Department of Justice for action shall be vested in the Attorney General, and may be exercised by him or by any officer in the Department of Justice designated by him.

Department of Justice

Sec. 3. Disbursement functions of United States marshals.—All functions relating to disbursement by United States marshals which would otherwise become functions of the Treasury Department on July 1, 1940, by virtue of the provisions of Executive Order No. 616 of June 10, 1933, as amended, are transferred to and vested in the Department of Justice to be exercised by United States marshals under the supervision of the Attorney General in accordance with existing statutes pertaining to such functions. Provided, that the Attorney General shall furnish the Secretary of the Treasury, when requested by him, such information as the Treasury Department may require with respect to the amounts of money received and disbursed by marshals and the procedure followed in connection therewith. Further, that upon the request of the Secretary of the Treasury, and with the approval of the Attorney General, the facilities of the Department of Justice may be utilized in the disbursement, or aiding in the disbursement, of public moneys of the United States available for expenditure by any agency of the Government.

Post Office Department

Sec. 4. Functions of postal disbursements.—All functions relating to the disbursement of postal revenues and all other funds under the jurisdiction of the Post Office Department and the Board of Trustees of the Postal Savings System which would otherwise become functions of the Treasury Department on July 1, 1940, by virtue of Executive Order No. 616 of June 10, 1933, as amended, are transferred to and vested in (a) the Board of Trustees of the Postal Savings System as to postal savings disbursements, and (b) the Postoffice Department as to all other disbursements involved, and such functions shall be exercised by postmasters and other authorized disbursing agents of the Postoffice Department and of the Postal Savings System in accordance with existing statutes pertaining to such functions. Provided, that the Postmaster General shall furnish to the Secretary of the Treasury, when requested by him, such information as the Treasury Department may require with respect to the amounts of money received and disbursed by the Postoffice Department, its postmasters and other fiscal officers, and the procedure followed in connection therewith. Further, that upon request of the Secretary of the Treasury, and with the approval of the Postmaster General, the facilities of the Postoffice Department may be utilized in the disbursement, or aiding in the disbursement, of public moneys of the United States available for expenditure by any agency of the Government.

Sec. 5. Transfer of interbuilding messenger functions.—(a) Except as prohibited by section 3 (b) of the Reorganization Act of 1939, the function of regular interbuilding messenger service (including the transportation of mail) and the function of transportation of mail between Government agencies and the City Postoffice, now exercised in the District of Columbia by agencies of the Government are transferred from such agencies to and consolidated in the Postoffice Department and shall be administered by the Postmaster General under such rules and regulations as the President shall prescribe. Provided, that this section shall not apply to the transportation of moneys and securities by armored truck or by other special services, or to messenger service between contiguous buildings.

(b) The Director of the Bureau of the Budget may waive the transfer of any motor vehicle owned within the purview of section 14 of this plan where he finds that the retention of such vehicle is essential to the performance of functions other than those transferred by this section.

Department of the Interior

Sec. 6. Certain functions of the Soil Conservation Service transferred.—The functions of the Soil Conservation Service in the Department of Agriculture with respect to soil and moisture conservation operations conducted on any lands under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Interior are transferred to the Department of the Interior and shall be administered under the direction and supervision of the Secretary of the Interior through such agency or agencies in the Department of the Interior as the Secretary shall designate.

Department of Commerce

Sec. 7. Transfer of Civil Aeronautics Authority.—

(a) The Civil Aeronautics Authority and its functions, the Office of the Administrator of Civil Aeronautics and its functions, and the functions of the Air Safety Board are transferred to the Department of Commerce.

(b) The functions of the Air Safety Board are consolidated with the functions of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, which shall hereafter be known as the Civil Aeronautics Board, and which shall, in addition to its other functions, discharge the duties heretofore vested in the Air Safety Board as to the investigation of aircraft accidents. The offices of the members of the Air Safety Board are abolished.

(c) The Administrator of Civil Aeronautics, whose functions shall be administered under the direction and supervision of the Secretary of Commerce, and the Civil Aeronautics Board, which shall report to Congress and the President through the Secretary of Commerce, shall constitute the Civil Aeronautics Authority within the Department of Commerce. Provided, that the Civil Aeronautics Board shall exercise its functions of rule-making (including the prescription of rules, regulations, and standards), adjudication, and investigation independently of the Secretary of Commerce. Provided further, that the board of accounting, personnel, procurement, and related routine management functions of the Civil Aeronautics Board shall be performed under the direction and supervision of the Secretary of Commerce through such facilities as he shall designate or establish.

Sec. 8. Transfer of Weather Bureau.—The Weather Bureau in the Department of Agriculture and its functions are transferred to the Department of Commerce and shall be administered under the direction and supervision of the Secretary of Commerce. Provided, that the Department of Agriculture may continue to make snow surveys and to conduct research concerning (a) relationships between weather and crops, (b) long-range weather forecasting, and (c) relationships between weather and soil erosion.

Department of Labor

Sec. 9. Transfer of certain functions relating to enforcement of wage payments on public construction.—The functions of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of the Interior under section 2 of the act of June 13, 1934, entitled "An Act to effectuate the purpose of certain statutes concerning rates of pay for labor," by making it unlawful to prevent anyone from receiving the compensation contracted for thereunder, and for other purposes," are transferred to and shall be administered by him or under his direction and supervision by such agency in the Department of Labor as the secretary shall designate.

U. S. Maritime Commission

Sec. 10. Transfer of nautical school functions.—The functions of the Secretary of the Navy with respect to furnishing, maintaining and repairing vessels for the use of State marine or nautical schools and with respect to administering grants of funds for the support of such schools are transferred to and shall be administered by the United States Maritime Commission. Jurisdiction over vessels, apparel, charts, books, and instruments now loaned to State marine or nautical schools is transferred from the Secretary of the Navy to the United States Maritime Commission.

Federal Security Agency

Sec. 11. Transfer of certain interior department institutions.—(a) Saint Elizabeth's Hospital—Saint Elizabeth's Hospital in the District of Columbia and its functions are transferred to the Federal Security Agency and shall be administered under the direction and supervision of the Federal Security Administrator. The annual report required to be submitted to the Congress by the superintendent of the hospital shall be submitted through the Federal Security Administrator. The annual report required to be furnished to the Secretary of the Interior by the board of visitors shall be furnished to the Federal Security Administrator.

(b) Freedmen's Hospital.—Freedmen's Hospital in the District of Columbia and its functions are transferred to the Federal Security Agency and shall be administered under the direction and supervision of the Federal Security Administrator.

(c) Howard University.—The functions of the Department of the Interior relating to the administration of Howard University shall be administered under the direction and supervision of the Federal Security Administrator.

(d) Columbia Institution for the Deaf.—The functions of the Department of the Interior relating to the administration of the Columbia Institution for the Deaf are transferred to the Federal Security Agency and shall be administered under the direction and supervision of the Federal Security Administrator.

(e) Federal Security Administrator.—The functions transferred by this section shall be administered under the direction and supervision of the Federal Security Administrator, who shall be appointed by the President, and whose office shall be in the Department of Commerce.

Sec. 12. Transfer of Food and Drug Administration.—The Food and Drug Administration in the Department of Agriculture and its functions, except those functions relating to the administration of the Insecticide Act of 1916 and the Naval Stores Act of 1917, are transferred to the Federal Security Agency and shall be administered under the direction and supervision of the Federal Security Administrator.

Sec. 13. Transfer of functions of heads of departments.—Except as otherwise provided in this plan, the functions of the head of any department relating to the administration of any agency or function transferred to the Federal Security Agency by this plan, and shall be exercised by the head of the department or agency to which such function is transferred by this plan.

Sec. 14. Transfer of records, property, and personnel.—Except as otherwise provided in this plan, all records and property (including office equipment) of the several agencies, and all records and property used primarily for the administration of any function transferred by this plan, and all personnel used in the administration of such agencies and functions (including officers and employees) shall be transferred to the Federal Security Agency and shall be administered under the direction and supervision of the Federal Security Administrator.

Sec. 15. Transfer of funds.—So much of the unexpended balances of appropriations, allocations, or other funds available for the use of any agency in the exercise of any function transferred by this plan, or for the use of the head of any agency in the exercise of any function so transferred, as the Director of the Bureau of the Budget with the approval of the President shall determine, shall be transferred to the agency concerned for use in connection with the exercise of the function so transferred. In determining the amount to be transferred, the Director of the Bureau of the Budget may include an amount to provide for the liquidation of obligations incurred against such appropriations, allocations, or other funds prior to the transfer. Provided, that the use of the unexpended balances of appropriations, allocations, or other funds transferred by this section shall be subject to the provisions of section 4 (d) (3) and section 9 of the Reorganization Act of 1939.

Ringside Table

NEPTUNE "CLOWN PARTY." All of those grinning, tumbling, tumbling clowns of the Wirth Circus, including the famous "Foodies" Hanneford, will be at the Neptune Room next Wednesday evening. This big "Clown Party" will be the equivalent of a circus preview. Except that we don't think "Foodies" will bring his horse, Washington's star clown Frank Bertillo, will be the host.

P. S. The Neptune anniversary party hosted so delightfully by Owner Raymond Lurba, was one of the finest of the year. Among the colorful folks enjoying pheasants and wine were artist-columnist Don Alba, advertising expert Ruth of the radio's "Gordon Hittman" show, and a lovely surprise was the singing of Gloria Lane, Washington girl who recently appeared at London's Palladium Theater.

THE "THREE FRESHMEN," smart New York trio, opened at the Cafe Caprice last evening. Our scouts say they're a highly diverting crew. They play guitar, accordion, bass and piano, all six.

HERBIE GLEN ECHO. The thousands of people who've been listening to Paul Kain's Orchestra via WJVS for the last year will finally get a chance to step to its rhythms in Glen Echo's Spanish Gardens Ballroom, beginning tomorrow. Paul started his musical career in Hollywood, where he made short films. He's headed star orchestra in the Rockefeller Rainbow Room, Commodore and Statler hotels in New York; also at the Wardman Park Hotel.

"GIRL WITH THE DANCING HANDS." That's Ruth Drysdale whose dainty dancing puppets have so enchanted Shoreham patrons that she will remain for another week. Ruth's star is "Lula Belle," who does both rumba and fan dances.

TONIGHT'S BIG EVENT is the opening of Les Brown's three-week engagement in the Wardman Metronome Room. The Brown Band is a big, gleaming outfit of 14 musicians and singer Wendy Bishop. Les is a Duke University man and his former roommate, E. L. Tolson, president of the local Duke Alumni, is going to make a lavish reunion party in Metronome this evening. Later on there'll be a "Duke University Night" with all the trimmings, probably on April 23.

VISITING AROUND. To Shar-Zad and her George Duff's orchestra play the most wonderful version of "Begin the Beguine" that has ever tantalized our ears. Betty Ferro, of the Federal Communications Commission, and Cameraman Byrd Fernough do an inspired rumba. Down to the Mayfair and find Lyle Smith and his boys giving a tremendous going-over to a parody on "She Always Walks With a Bump." Lyle has been playing all points east of Chicago since he left Mayfair a few months ago. Over to the Rainbow Room, crowded with members of the operating engineers' convention, most of whom must be good Irishmen, because they had Milton Davis playing the "Irish Washerwoman's Jig." And don't think the boys couldn't jig!

THOSE OPENINGS.—Flag Ship. A circus if there ever was one! Beautiful service by beautiful blonde, redhead and brunette midget-waitresses who later did a fancy drill. So many Senators and Congressmen we couldn't count 'em. The "Masked Marvel" berylene Penny Ford, the maskless marvel crooner. Sam Korman's dance music with a flash. Charming harp and accordion numbers by Marian and Martha. Everyone here for the Ebsons and their new Kokee-Kokee dance. Brooke and his hanjo, biggest moment of the evening.

Burt's Trans-Lux. Owner Burt Lopatin greeting the happy crowd. Pretty blonde Mrs. Lopatin there, too. Everyone here for the new Blue Trio led by Washington's favorite Frenchman, Henri de Alberte, and including Eddie Chase, brilliant accordionist-pianist.

MAYNARD'S WANTS TO SEE YOU NEW LOCATION—1508 14th N.W. COMPLETE LOBSTER DINNER 75c ANY Drink in the House 25c Good Food—Entertainment—Dancing "SEA FOOD MY SPECIALTY"

PAUL KAIN, Glen Echo's new king of rhythm. The Kain orchestra will play at Glen Echo's opening tomorrow evening.

and clever Ray Nelson who sings, plays guitar and string bass. The party was climaxed when Eddy Black arrived breathless with the news that he was the papa of a brand-new and wonderful son and Maestro Henri struck up "Rockabye, Baby."

New Departure. One of the hand-somest places in town, Partners Miller and Siebold spent $40,000 on it, and to great advantage. It seats around 400, is done in cool gray wood paneling and green leather. The murals, including a special beauty, "The Duvet of Heidelberg," are completely fascinating. Owner Fritz Miller took us on a tour of the kitchen glittering with stainless metal and with a battery of walk-in iceboxes big as a house. Didn't get in at the diversion hours, but know that the Whitehead-Bowersax accordion and violin are the tops. And everyone tells us that the double-piano of the Benitez Brothers takes you right out of the world.

PERSONALITIES PLUS. Owner Louis Calvi, of the Lido, the jolly host with the rapid-fire jokes. Also the suave Luigi (former Ciro's of Manhattan) who ushers you into the Lido's new and exciting Le Congo Room resounding with Angelo di Bella's Latin rhythm. Mrs. Lily Santmyer, the chic Parisienne.

Pan American Units to Honor Welles, Rowe

Union's Chief to Get Medal Here, Diplomat One in New York

Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union, and Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles will be decorated today for their contributions to good will among the American republics.

At noon, in the patio of the Pan American Union, Dr. Rowe will receive the 1940 gold medal of the Inter American Commercial Arbitration Commission from Spruille Braden, United States Ambassador to Colombia and honorary chairman of the commission. Secretary of State Hull received the award last year.

Welles will be presented with the gold medal of the Pan American Society of New York at a ceremony in his office at 10:15 a. m. The presentation will be by Frederick Hasler, president of the society.

Both events are in connection with the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Pan American Union. Commemorating the jubilee and honoring the Union's governing board, the Pan American Society of New York will give a luncheon at the Carlton Hotel at 1 p. m. today. Undersecretary Welles will be among the guests of honor. The governing board is composed of Ambassadors and Ministers from the 20 Latin-American republics.

Climax of the celebration is scheduled for next Monday, when President Roosevelt will address a special session of the governing board.

Cannon Predicts $500,000,000 Rise in WPA Funds

A "probable increase" in the WPA budget for the coming fiscal year was predicted yesterday by Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, after a White House conference.

Cannon's visit to the White House followed a House Appropriations Committee hearing at which Congress of Industrial Organizations' spokesmen urged a $150,000,000 deficiency appropriation to carry the WPA relief roll at its present strength for the rest of this year, and a $1,247,000,000 increase for the coming year.

Cannon indicated Congress might be asked to increase the WPA appropriation by $500,000,000 above the President's estimate, which was $985,000,000.

Kentuckians in Folk Festival To Sing 13th Century Hymns

Edith Fitzpatrick James, pictured with her dulcimer in her Prestonsburg, Ky., home. Mrs. James will bring a group of Kentucky plain-song singers to the National Folk Festival here April 25-27.

Gregorian Chants of the Middle Ages, Preserved in Hills by Descendants of English Settlers, are Still Heard in State's Churches

A thirteenth-century-old echo haunts the little churches of the Kentucky mountains. The ghost of Gregorian chants sung by monks during the Middle Ages, it can still be heard in the hymns chanted by descendants of early English colonists who brought the music here from the mother country.

The relationship between the ancient chants and the mountain church music was discovered by Mrs. Edith Fitzpatrick James, of Prestonsburg, Ky., who will bring a group of singers to the National Folk Festival here April 25-27.

Mrs. James grew familiar with the Kentucky version of the chants during her mountain childhood. While studying at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music she was struck by the similarity of the Gregorian chants which she heard there for the first time. Subsequent research and consultation with musical authorities proved that the resemblance was not a coincidence.

"The Kentucky hills, long famous for their pure English ballads, are also a treasure-trove of pure religious folk songs dating back much farther than the English ballads," according to Mrs. James. "These traditional chants were sent to England and later to America by the early colonists, some of whom wandered inland to settle in the Kentucky hills. Due to our years of isolation, the chants have remained in their original state as in no other part of the world."

The preachers, carpenters, farmers and timbermen who will sing with Mrs. James at the National Folk Festival look on the music as something they sing in church on Sunday rather than as a musical phenomenon. In addition to the chants, they will present "baptism," "foot-washing" and burial songs used in the mountain churches. Mrs. James will provide dulcimer accompaniment for the program.

There will be three matinees and three evening performances of the National Folk Festival. Tickets are now on sale at The Post.

Jackson Chided On 'Immunity' Of Communists

Bridges Attacks, Barkley Defends Attorney General

Jumbia. Threats of personal violence to Dr. Albert Blumberg, State party secretary, also were alleged.

In a letter to Attorney General Robert Jackson, Martin Chaney, for the executive committee, charged the Dies Committee agents acted illegally in searching the headquarters. He asked for a Department of Justice investigation of the raid and the ensuing renewed activities of the Ku Klux Klan.

Cross on Lawn Reported

Chaney's letter to the Attorney General charged that on the second night after the Baltimore raid, "police awakened Mr. Blumberg to inform him that a 6-foot cross had been burning on his lawn, 5 feet from his home. Throughout the following week anonymous phone calls and letters, some signed by the K. K. K., threatening physical violence and urging Mr. Blumberg to leave town, were received."

Calling for an investigation of the raid, the letter said "it makes no essential difference whether such lawlessness be that of an unruly mob or whether, under the guise of an 'investigation,' individuals seek to harass, persecute and terrorize law-abiding citizens and legally constituted political parties."

Blumberg has been charged with contempt by the committee after he refused to answer questions.

Senator Bridges asked whether Jackson has embarked on "a sit-down strike against putting Communists in jail."

He said Jackson recently had dismissed indictments "against 17 Communists in Detroit involved in the recruiting of young men for service in Spain," while, on the other hand, "the cases against 17 other persons—members of the so-called Christian Front—are being pressed with enthusiasm."

Majority Leader Barkley came to the defense of the Attorney General, calling him an "able public servant," who was "prompted by sincere, disinterested motives in an effort to bring about justice in the courts."

Minority Hits Smith Report, Defends NLRB

Majority Proposals Called 'an Attack On Rights of Labor'

By John B. Oakes.

Post Staff Writer

In an exhaustive report of some 45,000 words, the two-man Democratic minority of the Smith Committee came vigorously to the defense of the Labor Board yesterday and denounced the recommendations of the committee's majority as an "attack" on the rights of labor.

Representatives Healey, of Massachusetts, and Murdock, of Utah, comprising the New Deal element on the committee, accepted only one of the many amendments to the Wagner Act which were proposed by the majority a month ago: Provision that employers may ask for an election to settle claims of rival unions.

The only other amendment put forward by the minority was for addition of two new members to the Labor Board to provide a "fresh viewpoint" and, as a third recommendation, the minority suggested "that the bill submitted by the majority be rejected by Congress."

Accused of "Distortion"

In the 30 closely printed pages of its report, the minority accused its three colleagues—Chairman Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, and Representatives Routhohn, of Ohio, and Halleck, of Indiana (Republican)—of "distortion" of the evidence presented before the committee.

The minority maintained that the Smith amendments were "destructive to vital provisions" of the Wagner Act, were "based on an entire lack of substantial testimony," and in many cases "had not even a scintilla of evidence to support them."

In fact, said the minority, "the general procedure adopted by the majority of the committee" was to recommend to the House proposals for which "there is no support in the record."

Criticize Toland

In addition to slapping the majority, the two New Dealers declared that "we deplore the fact that during the many weeks of investigation counsel for the committee (Edmund M. Toland) submitted only evidence derogatory to the board and its administration."

After analyzing each of the proposed Smith amendments to the Wagner Act—and rejecting virtually all of them, Murdock and Healey proceeded to a laudatory review of the work of the board. Then, before making their own recommendations, they presented an analysis of some of the principal charges brought out against the board in testimony, dealing with alleged lobbying, bias, delay, personnel deficiencies and general maladministration.

against a cut in appropriations, the minority said "the evidence is in no way peculiar to the board" but is "a general problem which we commend to the Congress for study."

The severe criticism which Dr. William M. Leiserson, a board member, directed against Nathan Witt, NLRB secretary, evoked from the minority the observation that "little or no evidence was brought out which would have enabled us to make any finding as to whether Dr. Leiserson's position possessed any validity."

James P. Miller, former regional NLRB director at Cleveland, whose testimony "the majority apparently accepts" was characterized by Healey and Murdock as "a biased, untruthful and disgruntled former employee, discharged by the board for cause, whose testimony is not worthy of belief by the committee." Complaining of "the misleading character" of the majority report, Healey and Murdock said that during the hearings "the committee spent many weeks listening to charges and countercharges of unrelated instances of alleged indiscretion on the part of various employees of the board, rather than focusing its attention on the problems with which the board was dealing in the administration of the (Wagner) Act."

The Smith committee's proposal to deny reinstatement to employees who have engaged in violence during labor disputes "plays directly into the hands of labor spies and agents provocateurs," said the minority. Separation of prosecuting and judicial functions of the board, and other Smith recommendation, was disapproved by Murdock and Healey with the observation that "we are unwilling to single out labor as the guinea pig for hasty and unconsidered experimentation with the administrative procedure."

Dore Schary Has Something to Say on The Problems of Biographical Films; People and Things About the Local Theater

By Richard L. Coe
Substituting for Nelson A. Bell

WHEN THE OTHER DAY you heard that story about Darryl Zanuck making a film titled "The Life of Tyrone Power" starring Don Ameche, you were led to expect more on Dore Schary, the visiting script-writer who repeated the merry rumor over a Snake Eye. This is it.

Schary is quite a guy. A newspaper man who evolved through the script-writing stages to win an "Oscar" for his part in writing "Boys Town" and whose latest assignments have been on the two Edison films, Schary is in town to discuss ideas and get reactions on M.-G.-M.'s forthcoming "Simon Bolivar" and the State Department and Latin American diplomats. He's a big chap, looks more like a Hollywood heavy than one of those intellectuals that write and likes to talk about sailing and his two children.

But another of the things he talked of was a matter this department has often tangled about: Fact versus fiction in our screen biographies. With the wisdom of Solomon, he holds an unassailable position to which his experience lends respect.

"Film biography can't and shouldn't follow fact precisely," he says. "The way things happen are often so undramatic that they are boring. Take for instance, one of the problems which confronted us in the Spencer Tracy film, 'Edison, the Man.' When Edison invented the electric light, it was going to take him 40 hours to determine if the light was successful. If it worked for 40 hours, he figured it would work for 400. So they hung around the laboratory, doing other things, waiting for the 40 hours to pass. There's nothing very dramatic about that."

"So," Schary continued, "we had to heighten the interest in this. We invented a young fellow to whom Edison was an idol. After a struggle, he gets a job at the plant. One of his duties is to bring the new lamp upstairs for the test. He trips on the way, breaks the lamp. When the second has been made, Edison is human enough to understand the fellow's suffering and he insists that he bring it upstairs the second time. Even though this did not happen, it illustrates Edison's actual character and further heightens interest in the results of the second test."

Schary, though, has no use for the blatant falsifying of fact in such epics as "Suez" and "The Buccaneer." He feels, however, that such a deplorable tendency is a thing of the past and his present work here for "Simon Bolivar" bears out his contention.

Joan Marsh is the heroine of "Blame It on Love," a motion picture about a radio songstress who gave up her career to keep house in a wealthy home with the latest electrical appliances. This cinematized method of describing all the comforts of a modern home was screened at the Wardman Park Tuesday evening and might mean we are in for all sorts of films illustrating the wonders of this and that.

Perhaps That Bear Is Hunting Morgan!

That Kodiak bear that Frank Morgan missed on his last hunting trip to Alaska had better take to cover. For Morgan rides again. As soon as he completes work in "The Mortal Storm" and "Boom Town," the actor is off on his diesel-motored boat for a vacation cruise of six months. His first stop would be Alaska and he plans to stay there until he gets a Kodiak bear rug for his Palm Springs home.

Western Taboos

Not only is love-making taboo in Paramount's Hopalong Cassidy pictures, produced by Harry Sherman, but neither the star, William Boyd, nor Russell Hayden has ever smoked in one of these Westerns. They demand higher morals than any type of picture made in Hollywood.

Hollywood, April 11 (MS).—Well, honors go to Jack Warner for having nabbed the most sought-after play of the year—"The Man Who Came to Dinner."

The deal is all set and will be signed, sealed and delivered within a few days. Instead of the $300,000 which George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart asked for their play, they will accept a percentage deal and a guarantee which will probably net them much more than $300,000 for there's never been a play more widely publicized than this amusing satire on Alexander Woolcott.

In the contracts which Jack Warner and Hal Wallis have drawn up, Kaufman and Hart will write the adaptation of their play, which seems a wise provision, for the authors know the man in the wheel chair better than anyone else. The stage play is going full blast in New York with Monty Woolley and in Chicago with Clifton Webb, so that it will probably be at least a year before Warner can bring it to the screen. And oh, by the way, I wonder if they'll leave the line about me in the picture?

Of all the young actresses who have come up in the last year, there is none more promising than Betty Field. Not only is she a picture—and cute, but she can act. She does a magnificent job in "Two on an Island" on the New York stage, and you cannot deny she has been tops in all the movies she has made—"Seventeen," "What a Life" and "Of Mice and Men." You feel she is so young, so naive in appearance and so pretty that she belongs in the gay, light class, but she's just as good in dramatic roles. That's why

Leading the Field

The victory of Thomas E. Dewey over Senator Vandenberg in the Nebraska primary contest does not put the latter entirely out of the running, as some Dewey enthusiasts contend. But it undoubtedly puts Mr. Dewey in the forefront of the contenders for the Republican Presidential nomination. Had it not been for the developments in Europe, the returns from Nebraska would, no doubt, have been the chief current topic of discussion and speculation.

Political commentators and, for that matter, a number of Republican Party leaders have been quick to interpret the Nebraska verdict as an indication that Mr. Dewey can no longer be patronized or disparaged. His victory in Wisconsin, impressive though it was, could be discounted. The votes garnered in Illinois, where no opposition was encountered, were not significant, taken by themselves. But with three Midwestern agricultural States emphatically endorsing the Dewey candidacy, it is a different story.

The Illinois and Nebraska primaries are advisory only. The votes do not bind the delegates to support the Dewey candidacy. Indeed, very few of the delegates to the Republican convention will necessarily be governed by the results of a popular mandate. But party leaders will unquestionably be influenced by the outcome of such polls.

Mr. Dewey, of course, is a political officeholder of long standing. The fact that he is under 40 is not evidence of inexperience. It is merely an indication that he was aggressive enough to begin his public career at an age when most men are still in leading strings.

Mr. Dewey's ability to capture up-State New York votes by conducting whirlwind campaigns has already been demonstrated. But that might be explained as due to the interest aroused by his raids on racketeering. The country at large—especially rural America—knows little and cares less about the problems of the metropolis. To the Republicans of Wisconsin, Illinois and Nebraska the district attorney of New York was just another candidate for the Presidential nomination.

The success of his direct personal appeal for their support is a very impressive tribute, therefore, to the strength of his popular appeal.

What Price Progress?

The peoples of Scandinavia cannot comfort themselves, as can the British and French, with the thought that at last there is opportunity to strike vigorously against aggression. Their plight, on the contrary, is one of unrelieved gloom.

All that these little countries strove for, all they stood for, all the great contributions they have made to human civilization, now stand in danger of destruction. They are the latest pitiful examples of the fact that there are no rights of the weak which the strong and the ruthless find it necessary to respect. Even to a world inured to grim developments the tragedy of Scandinavia is shocking.

No nations anywhere in the world are more representative of the finest and best in Western civilization than are the Scandinavian kingdoms. All the great ideals of law, liberty, progress and peace, toward which the Western world has been working for centuries, were nearer achievement in these democracies than elsewhere.

They had succeeded in solving many of the great social and economic problems with which much larger and richer nations, such as the United States, are still grappling in vain. They had made themselves models of orderly and cooperative achievement. They asked nothing of their neighbors but to be respected as they respected them. The Scandinavian nations had long since abandoned all thoughts of aggrandizement and had proved that the victories of peace could produce infinitely greater rewards than those of war.

There is general knowledge of what has happened in Austria, in Czechoslovakia, in Poland after those countries were taken over by Germany. It is tragic to think that even a shadow of the same fate may be in store for the latest victims of aggression. Perhaps the pledges of independence which the Third Reich has given Denmark and Norway and the promise to respect Swedish neutrality, can be taken seriously. But in view of the record one must be skeptical.

The fate which the Scandinavian states sought so desperately to avert is upon them. It was not enough that they were peaceful, decent and highly civilized. They had committed the one unpardonable crime, by Nazi standards, of being small and weak.

German Casualty Lists

Long as are the odds against them, the Norwegians have refused to surrender to German tyranny without a struggle. And this peaceful people is today fighting in defense of home and country with a courage and fortitude which must command the unbounded admiration of the civilized world.

But courage and fortitude constitute an inadequate defense against mechanized armaments and greatly superior numbers. That is why the fate of Norway depends less on the resistance of her stout-hearted inhabitants than on what the Allies are able to do. The fate of Norway depends less on that small country's fighting strength, which is slight, than on the force which Great Britain and France can hurl into the scales. And, by sea and air, the Allies, particularly the British, have entered the lists with a vigor and determination which the Nazis probably did not anticipate.

Indeed, this is the first time that the Third Reich has had to measure up to a fair fight against a powerful opponent. Austria, Czechoslovakia and, most recently, Denmark, gave up without a struggle. Poland was overwhelmed and overrun so speedily that the war in that region appears in retrospect to have been more in the nature of a dress rehearsal than a real test of Germany's military capacity. The fight around Norway, however, is one in which the opponents of Germany are in a position to deliver some real blows, and Britain is taking full advantage of her opportunity.

This is a new and unpleasant experience for the German conscripts and their families. A large part of the prestige which Hitler enjoys among his people has been due to his uncanny ability to achieve maximum results with a minimum of risk. But this time he has embarked on a gamble in which he has laid his people open to some savage punishment.

The gamble may succeed. But even so no amount of suppression, or of explanation by Dr. Goebbels' propagandist machine, will be able to hide the lists of dead and missing from the German people. Nor will any governmental controls prevent them from wondering uneasily whether the Fuehrer, in his criminal extension of the war to Norway, has not for the first time blundered irretrievably.

In this domestic German reaction lies one of the most important aspects of the grim struggle now raging amid the mountains of the Land of the Midnight Sun, and in and above the waters surrounding the shores the Vikings knew.

The Sine Qua Non

The national desire to stay out of the war does not and cannot mean indifference on our part to the issues involved in that struggle, or to the sort of peace which will determine the character of the postwar world.

No nation has wholly escaped the impact of the European struggle. And none will be unaffected by war's aftermath. It is not too early, therefore, for the American people to begin considering not only the kind of a world they would like to see emerge from the present blood bath, but also what America's relationship to that postwar world should be.

For this reason the American Academy of Political and Social Science, now holding its forty-fourth annual meeting in Philadelphia, is performing a public service by making its general topic the subject of "The United States and Durable Peace." Like its sister organization, the New York Academy of Political Science, the Philadelphia academy is rising to its full responsibility in educating the American people to the realities of our national and international problems.

Realism is particularly called for in any consideration of America's role in the postwar period. The grim events which have occurred in Scandinavia this week have made it clear to all that there can be no talk of a durable peace so long as small and weak nations are at the mercy of large and powerful neighbors.

Without some international body capable of keeping the would-be aggressors in check, and providing reliable security for the weak, all talk of a durable peace is bound to be so much sound and fury, signifying nothing.

While Washington Burns

Everything connected with the remodeling and inspection of the White Court apartments can be accurately characterized as slapshod. As the coroner's jury continues its investigation into the death of three persons in the fire which destroyed that building this fact is more and more clearly established.

Latest witnesses revealed that no plans for the recent alteration of the chimney possibly responsible for the blaze were asked for or submitted to the office of the building inspector at the time permission was granted for the remodeling work. In addition, the officer with inspection jurisdiction in the O street locality received no word that the alteration had been authorized and consequently never set foot inside the building.

Only now, after three persons have lost their lives, five have been injured and many more deprived of all their possessions, has it come to light that a brick was missing from the chimney near the first floor level, that a crack ran the entire length of the chimney and some of the lining was missing.

If such an alarming condition escaped notice so long in this case, it is entirely probable that the same is true in countless other cases. Building inspection is known to be inadequate, and when it is carried out the regulations may be flouted by the owners at the expense of comparatively small fines. In some instances also, the jury was told, the law approves evident fire hazards.

There seems to be no permanent cure for these evils except a local government competent and strong enough to keep the office of building inspection functioning efficiently. The O street fire is a glaring result of the kind of slapshod government Washington suffers under daily, although perhaps in less conspicuous ways. Unless some positive action is taken by Congress soon, members will be properly accused of fiddling while Washington burns.

Good Will Ambassador

The premature death in Tokyo of Frank Hedges, the dean of American newspapermen in the Far East, deprives the journalistic profession of one of those very able foreign correspondents who also serve almost as unofficial ambassadors of this country.

A native of Missouri, and honor graduate of the famous school of journalism at the State university there, Mr. Hedges first went to Japan in 1922. For nearly five years he served as managing editor of the famous Japan Advertiser, making it incomparably the best English-language newspaper in the Orient. He then became chief of the Far Eastern Bureau of the Christian Science Monitor and of late years had represented the North American Newspaper Alliance in Tokyo, in addition to other writing.

To The Post Mr. Hedges at frequent intervals contributed most illuminating and admirably objective dispatches on developing trends in Asia, a series of three such articles on "The Japan of Today" having appeared on the page opposite this only last month. On the editor's desk lies a letter from Frank, dated three weeks ago, saying "If all goes well, I shall sail for home May 18."

All did not go well. A few days short of his forty-fifth birthday Frank Hedges is dead in Tokyo. But his work goes on. The many American newspapermen whom he so hospitably papered on their visits to Japan owe much of their knowledge of that country to his penetrating guidance. The many Japanese who took pride in his friendship have derived an equally beneficial understanding of America from his tutelage.

Not since the days of Lafcadio Hearn has there been a more sympathetic American student of Japanese customs, traditions and aspirations. Unlike Hearn, however, Hedges never let sentiment confuse the clarity of his judgments. His services as a thoughtful expositor of Japan to America, and of America to Japan, were very great. It is doubly tragic that his death comes at a time when this work of interpretation is of greater importance than ever before.

Letters To The Editor

Cure For Crime

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent crime wave in Washington has brought to my mind a peculiar fact that seems to be buried in oblivion. That is the fallacy in thinking that more policemen will mean less crime. I recall that Maj. Ernest Brown asked for more patrolmen as a remedy for crime conditions; some civic-minded individuals even suggested supplementing the Metropolitan Police with National Guardsmen; others were willing to deputize citizens, thus making them official snipers in behalf of law and order. Yet in the din of all this clamor I have not heard one voice come to the fore with a suggestion that will ameliorate crime conditions. I do not think such a voice has spoken.

But allow me to point out that, among more enlightened thinkers, violations of the law today are considered a social disease. And in physical diseases they place more emphasis on prevention and less on control. So it should be in the case of crime.

I have noticed that Maj. Brown and other public-spirited citizens point with pride to the effects of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club. They claim that it has reduced juvenile delinquency some 300 per cent. This type of activity should extend, with modifications, of course—even further. Although we cannot say that it is possible to talk a man out of committing a crime, there is much that enlightens public opinion and corrective measures can do toward ameliorating conditions under which crimes are committed.

Modern penology does not accept the thesis that incarceration is the solution of crime problems; it advocates rejuvenation of the individual into a contributive factor in society. It assumes that the criminal is not by nature but is the product of his environment.

On the other hand, whenever a crime wave is attributed to lack of sufficient police, it is an admission of defeat. What is needed is social rehabilitation work.

A Plea For Abbott Vocational School

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a letter appearing in The Post of April 8, Mr. George M. Gooch, first vice president, Sixteenth Street Highlands Citizens Association, commends the action of the House of Representatives in passing the bill for the Abbott Vocational School at Uppah street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, and allotting an appropriation for a suitable building. The Uppah street site had been recommended by an impressive number of national and District bureau and officials for the building of a new Wilson Teachers College. A site for the Abbott Vocational School had been recommended on the Brentwood tract, at Florida avenue, near Seventh street.

Permit me to set forth reasons that appear to some of us to justify the choice made by the House of Representatives when the respective claims of the two institutions were under consideration.

1. There is ample room in that part of the city for both a teachers college and a vocational school, so that the selection of the Uppah street site for the new Abbott Vocational School is not the appropriation of the only available site. There remains, for instance, the splendid tract formerly occupied by the Kennedy Street Reservoir and grounds.

2. The Dennison Vocational School for girls already occupies the north portion for a part of 10 of the Uppah street tract.

3. The trend of population in the District being mainly north and west, who can say how long the Uppah street site, adjoining Gallaudet College, will be central to the

Byrd's Trip

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was glad to read that Congress balked at providing Admiral Byrd with $250,000 additional funds for worse than wasting upon his pet hobby of trying to exist in a locality only fit for polar bears.

That money would go a long way in helping to feed some of our army of unemployed, none of whom would care to have a free passage to the South Pole. One would imagine that Admiral Byrd's past experience, in that icy locality, where he all but lost his life, would have cured him of his queer idea of trying to "discover" new lands only suited to penguins.

If Admiral Byrd is still in the employ of the Government, he could certainly spend his time to more advantage in Washington than hunting around at the South Pole for new lands which he can't sell to anybody.

Adam And Eve

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The arguments appearing in The Post about whether Adam caused the "fall of man" through some of his cussedness, or whether it was caused by Eve for eating the forbidden fruit, are reminiscent of some of the discussions of the theologians and philosophers of the Dark and the Middle Ages.

It is recorded that the metaphysicians were often in dispute about the number of angels that could sit on the point of a needle. To this Confucius would probably say: "Angels who sit on point of needle have early spring."

J. F. GROSS,
Washington, April 9.

"The Retirement Age"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "The Retirement Age," of April 6, strongly supporting the renewed recommendations of the Civil Service Commission for modification of the inflexible compulsory retirement age limits in the Government civil service, especially the postal service and skilled trades, is to be heartily commended, not only by thousands of those in these services approaching the retirement age who know they are well qualified to continue several years longer to perform their duties and are in need of such continued employment, but also by all who really are concerned on behalf of governmental economy.

It is irrefutable, as both your editorial and the commission indicate, that many civil service employees at the retirement age are at or near the period of their greatest usefulness and efficiency, and their enforced retirement is a costly procedure for the Government. In addition to continuing to pay the same compensation to another employee, the Government must pay to the retiring employee a substantial amount each month in the form of a pension.

And, as the commission says, the procedure is needlessly harsh in the case of competent employees who really need for a while longer a postponement of the very considerable reduction in income which retirement entails. While this, of course, should not be the predominant consideration in the matter, yet it should have weight. But the benefit, as you well state, would be quite as much for the Government as for the individual employee.

At this time, when there is so much professed concern about reducing governmental expenses, the economy aspect of this matter would seem to be sufficient, and it will be with all those who really stand for reasonable and justifiable economy.

The merit of this proposition was recognized and endorsed by the Senate Civil Service Committee and the Senate itself early last year in approving an act carrying a provision for continuance in the civil service from year to year for three years of efficient employees willing to so continue. The act termed it "advantageous to the public service." But when the measure came out of the House Civil Service Committee this provision had been eliminated, and the measure finally passed last August without this very meritorious provision.

But, as your editorial well observes, if there are any sound arguments against such a provision in the retirement law, they have not been brought to public attention. It would be interesting to know why this provision was eliminated. One can think of a motive which might animate some Congressmen in desiring to have vacancies in the Government service to fill as fast as possible, but it is not a motive that comports with the principles of such measures as the Hatch Act that seem to have the favor of Congress just now, nor with the interests of the Government and of many veteran, faithful, efficient employees in the civil service.

It is to be hoped that in the pending proposals for amendment of the civil service retirement law there will be included this worthy proposition which is so commendably advocated by the Civil Service Commission and admirably supported by The Post.

The Post Impressionist

Upsy-Daisy, Sen. Tobey

Here in Georgetown, across the city from the Capitol where Senator Tobey has been screaming that the census is just another way for Uncle Sam to pry into private lives, my personal enumeration took exactly nine minutes, and was anything but a one-sided process. In fact, it was as much of a give-and-take interview as any I have seen in twelve years of newspaper reporting.

I had a date for 9 o'clock of a Saturday morning with the census taker in our district, a middle-aged and rather portly woman. She was an hour late for the second, but before I had time to mention that fact she disarmed me completely by telling me why.

"I've kept you waiting, I bet," she said, "but I had a call from my boss, and when you got a call from the boss you have to go. You know that."

She had me there. I simply said that that was very true.

She plopped down on the studio couch, and spread out her big card-board book and the wide sheets. I settled into my pet chair across the room and took up my pipe.

"Would you mind pulling your chair up closer," she asked. "I don't hear very well. Just smoke or not, it's all the same to me." I changed to a rocker and answered the first question, saying that there were just two of us living in the apartment, and that my wife was out.

She did a little scratching on the blank and told me that she had put us down as male and female and white, without asking me, but that the other day some census taker, right here in Georgetown, had asked a white family whether the occupants of the house were white or colored. I didn't think that was very strange, for the races are pretty closely domiciled here. In fact, I made a mental note that that particular census taker should have had a special citation for caution.

I asked the lady, by knowing how much to the dollar my salary was for the past year, but I had the income tax duplicate right at hand to prompt me. When she saw the tax blank she assured me hastily that the census had nothing to do with taxation, and that was the first time I thought of Senator Tobey and his warnings.

I forgot the fears, though, for I was stumped cold as to how many hours I worked per week until I remembered the law and the fact that our office was very strict in following it. My wife works for the Government, and I had no idea how many hours she had put in, but in a city of Government workers the enumerators know that Mr. Checker put down 39 hours. I told her my wife was a librarian.

"I don't know what they do with all the librarians," she said. "I get librarians every day." That gave me food for thought myself. There was a little discussion about whether a census taker should publish six days a week was a daily, strictly speaking, but she said she guessed it was, and that satisfied me.

I missed on my age, and had to figure it out myself, now or not. Of the few dates I can call offhand, I was completely flabbergasted about my wife's age, and made a quick guess. (That's the one only part of the whole thing about which I am conscience bothers me at all; I don't know yet, for I never mentioned it to my wife.)

When I told her that both my wife and I were born in Indiana, and were living in Indianapolis 10 years ago, she came right back with "Hoosiers, eh? That's the Hoosier State, isn't it?"

I told her it was.

Then, as though to show that she was willing to trade even on family affairs, he said: "I had an uncle living in Indianapolis, but I don't know where he is now. I guess he's dead. That's how much you know about uncles." That made me feel very close to her, for I never could keep track of uncles, either.

I had to telephone the house manager about the rent, for she reminded me that the rental agents had begun paying the utilities, and charging tenants a flat-over-all rate. I thought of Senator Tobey again, for it suddenly dawned on me that the Government knew more about me than I did about myself—without even asking me.

There was a pause, and some mumbling and some scratching on the sheet. "I say this stuff about baths, electric refrigeration, and the like out loud because some folks might think I was skipping it," she said as she marked me up with the modern conveniences. She was away ahead of me again, and I took sudden satisfaction, almost pride, in the fact that she didn't know that I have two leaky faucets and a drain stopper that doesn't hold.

"This is 308, isn't it?" she asked as she completed the list. "Some people wonder why I don't remember all these apartment numbers, but if they had as many apartment numbers as I do, they wouldn't remember them either. I don't let them stay in my head, that's why."

She told me that was all, and I felt proud of my stenographic training that I had heard President Roosevelt admit at a press conference on Tuesday that he had been stumped completely by his questions, and would have to have the census-taker—the boss of the census—return later. I even thought of a long-forgotten law of logic that, by the comparison, would have shown me to be smarter than the President.

She checked the list of apartments she had yet to visit, and said that the list gets messy in a day. Then she asked me to paraphrase to her, stuffing the sheets between the big backs.

"I picked this stuff all up off the floor too many times yesterday," she said. "What I've got this time is a piece of string around my neck for today. But, goodness knows, I may want to hang myself before this is all over."

I got up and knocked out my pipe. "Upsy-daisy," she said, pulling herself up from the couch. "Thank you very much."

After she was gone I went to my desk and began to write down the things I could remember of what she had told me as she gathered what the Government wanted from me. My foolscap wasn't as wide as her charts, but I swear that I know as much—in a general way—about her as she does about me.

"Upsy-daisy," I said, as I folded up my typewriter.

CLAUDE A. MAHONEY.

Third-Term Theorizing

By Ernest Lindley

The War Question

THE NAZI invasion of Denmark and Norway was hardly 12 hours old when ardent advocates of a third term began to proclaim that it made Mr. Roosevelt's re-nomination absolutely necessary. This is in line with the theory of the third-termists that if the international situation grew worse Mr. Roosevelt could be persuaded to re-elect and could easily be re-elected. And that theory rests, in turn, partly on the belief that in time of crisis the voters will hesitate to change leaders.

Whether Mr. Roosevelt is remarkably qualified to conduct our foreign policy is a question in itself. He has an exceptional background of experience. He is especially familiar with naval and military matters. Even the professionals admit that, for an amateur, he is extremely well versed in naval strategy and tactics. In fact, as a young amateur during the World War, he was able to teach the professional Navy men a trick or two.

ON CURRENT developments he is no better informed than almost any man would be who had the facilities available to the President. He has appointed some good ambassadors and ministers. However, there are probably at least 50 correspondents in Washington who, in the ability to collect, digest and appraise information are equal or superior to the best of the campaign contributors rewarded by Roosevelt with foreign posts. Certainly a good many newspapermen, both in Washington and in the foreign service of American newspapers and press associations, have a greater knowledge of history, diplomacy, military matters, and European affairs in general than many of the President's official reporters from abroad.

The real question is whether the President's judgment on foreign affairs and what our policy ought to be, both in the long run and in each situation as it arises, is sound. Examined closely, his record in the conduct of foreign affairs is spotty. Moreover, he has frequently struck events which are ominous to those who believe that the United States should not again enter a war on the far side of the Atlantic. On the whole, however, he has steered a course which seems to have satisfied a majority of the American people. Often extreme in language and venturesome in his minor gestures, he usually has been cautious in his major actions.

So far as a third term goes, however, no further clamor from his supporters is necessary to bring about his nomination. It is his if he will take it. Shouting for a third term every time the European war takes a new twist only thickens the political atmosphere surrounding decisions which the President should make, and unquestionably will try to make, solely in the national interest.

When the third-termists spoke up this time, the reasons for the Nazi invasion were not clear. They are not clear yet. The consequences were not clear, and are not clear yet.

AS TO THE REASONS, several hypotheses are current among intelligent and generally well-informed observers:

1. That the Nazis wanted to assure the safety of their vital Swedish sources of ore and of the sea-route to Germany via Narvik.
2. Carrying this a bit further, that they felt imperiled not only by British efforts to close the route via Norwegian territorial waters, but by the possibility that British naval units would try to force their way into the Baltic and cut the ore-route via the Gulf of Bothnia. Even before the days of great air forces, forcing the narrow entrances to the Baltic would have been a venturesome enterprise. But in the World War Winston Churchill tried to force the Dardanelles. Information reached here a few days ago that with the break-up of the ice in the Baltic, strong currents threatened to sweep away the protective mine fields laid by the Germans. Whether or not the British were planning so bold a stroke, the Germans are much more secure against such an eventuality, if they have air and submarine bases on both sides of the entrance to the Baltic.

3. That the Nazis wanted the Norwegian fjords as submarine bases. From Norway they could harass the British blockade patrols, but they are brought no nearer the main steamship lines to Great Britain.
4. That the Germans urgently needed to replenish their lander with Scandinavian food supplies. Several weeks ago, experts in our Government calculated that unless they could develop new sources of supply, the Nazis would begin to feel a really serious food shortage by September. Since then, have come reports that large amounts of foodstuffs, especially vegetables, which they had stored, were ruined by the exceptionally cold winter. If the Scandinavian expedition was a foraging party, it was a sign of weakness.

5. That the "dynamics of Nazism" required another act of aggression, and that Hitler struck where the risks seemed the smallest. As to the consequences, it remains to be seen whether the Nazis can hold Norway, whether and when the airplane can conquer the battleship. Among these important unknown factors, the third term can take care of itself until July. Then the President's decision can, and will, be reached, on the basis of the situation then existing.

Enough Is Enough

I know that spring's around again. And, boy, it's welcome here! The winter was no bargain to throw in with any year; it brought the record snows and gales, the days so cold and wet; it kept us up all winter long with scarlets and with rheum.

It was the winter when the pipes froze up a dozen times—The winter when the weather gave The works to Southern climes; The winter of new racing bills, Of war on fishing smacks, And plans in many towns to build At least six racing tracks.

The winter when our Congress rushed A loan to Finland and Said sweetly, "Do not spend it on A war, you understand!" The winter of Pinocchio, Who frightened kiddies so They haven't quite recovered yet From such a creepy show.

It was the winter when the young were lunched by Eleanor, And when F. D. then spanked 'em and Asked, "What's the shouting for?" The winter when our Welles went forth To put war on the bum—The peaceful winter when we feared The worst was yet to come.

The winter when we went stark mad From "Do you think he'll run?" And had to read the love notes Of a "Honey Girl" and Kuhn; The winter when the screen was full Of dust storms, flames and strife, And every third producer did A film of Lincoln's life.

The winter when Joe Stalin won, And Hitler didn't die; The winter when brave Finland fell As all her "friends" stood by... Ah, spring, I know is here again, And, boy, it makes me glad To see it give the bum's rush to A winter like we've had.

Mahatma Gandhi is to star in a movie to be titled "Mahatma Gandhi." It is being made in India. It made in Hollywood the moguls would have looked the Mahatma over and pronounced him "not the type" for a Mahatma.

The picture is to be shown in America. Well, it will at least give us a respite from costume plays.

It is seven years since America got beer back. And from present indications it will take at least seven more to teach modern bartenders how to draw a glass of it.

Complaints are being heard that attendants at New York's Information Center are giving out inaccurate information and directions. As they are all native New Yorkers, this is unavoidable. No New Yorkers know any thing about the city. He has to ask directions for getting to the Statue of Liberty or the Planetarium. The Information Center should be manned by out of towners from Derby, Conn., Wappingers Falls, N. Y., and places like those.

Mayor LaGuardia of New York promises cheaper hotel rates during the World's Fair. "There will be at least 200,000 rooms available at $1 and $1.50," he says. Well, the answer to that is "Wanna bet?"

And, anyhow, the average visitor to New York for the Fair isn't looking for a dollar room. He wants to stop in a fairly good hotel and it was these hotels which last year upped all the rates, even on the year around patrons.

'The Chosen People'

IT MAY HAVE been noticed that antisemitism and antiholocaustism have now vanished from the list of urgent problems of Adolf Hitler's German nation, and that the actual war and the propaganda are being waged against only Christian peoples and plutocracy. There is no Jewish nation, but for years Hitler berated Soviet Russia as the enemy and attempted to show that bolshevism and Jewishness were identical. There was a slight inconsistency wherein he and Goebbels and Julius Streicher also insisted that the Jews were rich and grasping capitalists, and they confused matters by enormous confiscations of property and money from German and Austrian Jews whom they were vilifying as Communists.

Antibolshevism was dropped, however, when Hitler and Josef Stalin made their alliance and, although the condition of the Jews under Hitler, whether Communists or capitalists, poor or rich, has not improved, they are no worse off than the captive Christians of Austria, Czechoslovakia, Poland and, now, Denmark and Norway. The Swedes obviously are next on the program, and the Swedes are not Jews, Communists or Plutocrats. The captive Christian peoples are held to be subhuman, put on earth to toil for Hitler's chosen people, and they have no rights or privileges. However, they are to be fed reasonably well on the leftovers from the German table for the same reason that Southerners in the antebellum days fed and cared for their slaves and an intelligent farmer cares for his horse, weak or sick slaves cannot work well.

As the Nazi program develops in action, it becomes plain that every perky which Hitler charged against the Jews in his long propaganda was built into the German program. Whereas he charged that the Jews were determined to disrupt, corrupt and conquer the other peoples of the earth, it is obvious that that is the revealed purpose of the Germans under Adolf Hitler. His methods were disclosed in Austria first, then in the Sudeten country and now in Poland. In all of these campaigns he began by organizing groups of traitors under orders from Berlin. He assassinated patriots, beat leaders and little people, and devised the masses with radio propaganda and, while inflicting the most inhuman tortures on true Germans in Germany proper, screamed horribly about the persecutions which were visited on treacherous minorities by Germans in the slip-over zones between Germany and the neighbor lands. The United States has not escaped the activities of the German world-conquerors. Here the Nazi anti-American Bund has kindly volunteered to save the country from the same bolshevism, or Jewish bolshevism, as he calls it, with which Hitler has now made a military and economic alliance, and the activities and propaganda of his chosen people follow the same course, up to a point, that was taken by his agents in Europe.

No low and cunning trick of finance that Hitler charged against the international Jewish bankers who, somehow, were also Jewish bolshevists, has been too foul for the leader of his chosen people in his mission to conquer the peoples of the world. Any American businessman who has attempted to operate in or with Germany can testify that it is folly to trust a German business firm under the Nazi rule, and many great public improvements in Germany were paid for with money which Americans loaned in good faith and which Hitler then confiscated in bad faith.

As for the mission of the Jews to destroy Christianity, constantly attributed to them by Hitler and, more recently in this country by American dupes or knowing tools of Hitler, the experience of Christianity under the Führer shows that Christians have more to fear from the chosen people of Germany. The record is too long to be repeated here, but it is too well known to need repetition. It need only be pointed out by way of proving that another item in the terrible program of world Jewry, as waved before the world like a bloody shirt by the leader of the German nation, is in fact an urgent undertaking of the chosen people of the Reich.

There is no excuse for pretending to think, so as to evade a terrible decision, that the Nazis exclude the United States from their plan to conquer or dominate the peoples of the world and use them as robots to produce the means of supporting the chosen people on the higher level to which they are told that their race entitles them. The Americans are frankly regarded as mongrels and vermin. They offend the sight and finer sensibilities of the chosen people. To say that 100,000,000 patriots will spring to arms to defeat them is to beg the question, because Hitler will not attack by arms until he has first disrupted and corrupted the victim. Why can it be hoped that a race who regard themselves as the chosen people will neglect to draw upon a land as rich as the United States for that higher living standard to which, by race, they feel themselves entitled?

Titantic Struggle

By Barnett Nover

The Allies Strike Back

IT WILL BE DAYS, it may be months and even years, before the full details of the conflict raging off Norway are made available. For the moment a thin trickle of admitted facts is lost in a vast torrent of unverified and possibly unfounded rumors. But there is no disguising either the immensity of the struggle or its crucial nature. For both sides it is literally a matter of life and death.

Precisely what was in Hitler's mind when he ordered the onslaught on Denmark and Norway is impossible to say with the least degree of certainty. It is clear, however, that in undertaking this latest in his long series of aggressions, he was gambling for high stakes but against no mean odds.

This attack on Norway is proving to be no Austrian adventure, no unconfessed march into another Prague, no repetition of the blitzkrieg against Poland. It is a struggle in which, for the first time since he became Führer, all the trumps are not in his hand. And if he stands to gain a good deal if successful he also stands to lose much if he is not.

If the German forces succeed in holding, consolidating and possibly extending the gains they made in their lightning assault on Norway, Hitler will stand to gain in at least five directions.

In the first place, he will be in a position to make a serious dent in the blockade. Secondly, from Norwegian air bases at Bergen and Trondheim, the powerful German air force will be in a far better position than it has been hitherto to launch aerial attacks on Great Britain.

Thirdly, Hitler's calculations will again have proved to be right so that whatever grumbling and dissatisfaction there may have developed in Germany since the war began will disappear as a result of the enhanced prospect of victory. Fourthly, the prestige of the Allies would be terribly shaken so that the remaining small neutrals of Europe will be very much less disposed to resist German pressures than heretofore.

And last but not least, a German triumph in Norway will strongly tempt Italy to implement her alliance with the Reich and go into the war against the Allies.

It is plain, therefore, that there are material as well as psychological advantages to be derived from this Scandinavian adventure. But their very magnitude and importance makes it certain that the Allies will do all in their power to prevent Hitler from carrying out his plans. What is equally important is that, for the first time since the war began, Hitler has made a move to which the Allies can reply with weapons in which they enjoy the superiority.

The struggle over Norway involves military and air as well as naval elements and of these the latter is certainly not the least important. Germany can not conquer Norway unless and until she has accumulated sufficient strength in the occupied zones to fight off any and all attempts to dislodge her and is also in a position to maintain uninterrupted communications with such zones. That is why, in addition to the troops that were originally sent to Oslo, Bergen, Narvik and other Norwegian

Forces At Work In Italy Today

The Psychological And Political Factors

By Dorothy Thompson.

ROME.
IN AUGUST, when Hitler's march into Poland was a signal for the opening of the European war, Mussolini was not prepared, politically, militarily, economically or psychologically to take part in the war. In particular, Italy was not psychologically prepared to take part in the war on the side of Germany. In this column I will deal with the psychological and political forces inside Italy.

NOTHING whatever can be reported in Italy which does not lead back eventually to the person of Mussolini himself. Those who have seen him recently report that he is vigorous, still rides and still boasts that he can beat his "bro" at tennis. He appears in public less and less. The magnetic power of the popular mass leader is still there, but it is not being exploited to the extent that it once was.

On the other hand his regime is intact. To be sure, there is more anti-Fascist feeling in Italy than one would guess from the outside—and by this I mean more outside anti-Fascist feeling. Perhaps it would be better to describe it as neo-Fascist feeling: impatient with restriction and impatient with the suppression of all criticism. Interestingly enough, this is discernible among the intelligent and educated youth, the very youth that has lived its entire life under the present regime. A part of this youth, which would deny that it is anti-Fascist, nevertheless feels that the Fascist regime has passed the revolutionary stage and can now afford more liberalism.

The thesis of a student in one of the universities was recently on Benedetto Croce, Italy's leading critic, an incorrigible liberal who has remained in Italy quietly, but distinctly under a cloud. The thesis, which dealt candidly and sympathetically with the Crocean ideas, was permitted by the university, which, like every other institution in Italy, is under the watch of the government.

I AM TOLD that the heroes of this section of the youth are the great leaders of the Italian Risorgimento, particularly Mazzini, who represents the flower of Italian liberalism. This part of the youth is also anti-imperialist, socialistically inclined, but anti-Communist, and finds support in the more liberal branches of the church. The church, as everybody knows, is not a party, but a movement. The official Vatican newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, takes a quite different tone and attitude from the predominant Fascist press.

FURTHERMORE, there was at the outbreak of the war a considerable, though unpublicized conflict going on inside the Fascist Party. The Fascist militia had a force of over 700,000 men. As the army of the party they enjoyed privileges not possessed by the regular army. They were, indeed, the pampered children of the regime. Their pay, for instance, was many times that of the army's.

The common Italian soldier was paid 80 centesimi a day. The official value of the lira is roughly 55 cents. Its purchasing power is above that, but nevertheless the common soldier was getting the equivalent of 3 or 4 cents a day. The Fascist militia, on the other hand, were paid from 10 to 15 lira a day, or from 50 to 75 cents, or above that in purchasing power.

The army, quite naturally, did not like this, and a tension developed between the army and the militia, which, in a far less acute degree, resembled the tension of 1934 between Capt. Roehm's Storm Troopers and the German army.

The accusations of the army against the militia were also similar. They insisted that the militia was arrogant and that it had not acquitted itself with superior results.

ETTORE MUTI

doubtability in Abyssinia or Spain.

There was also popular hostility to the role that very young men played in the regular police, the carabinieri, whose actions were considered irresponsible. The secretary of state for war and the chief of staff were combined in one office under Gen. Pariani, and both he and the secretary general of the party, Starace, were unpopular.

The German-Russian pact was also deeply unpopular in Italy and not only offended the religious feeling of the Italian people but the turn about face of Germany could not easily be followed by Mussolini because of the Spanish war. It must be remembered that Hitler's participation in the Spanish war was largely by means of material. Very few Germans went to Spain. But Italy really fought in Spain under the banner of freeing Spain of communism. Many Italian men died in Spain, and their mothers, sisters and wives are walking around Italy in mourning today.

Furthermore, Germany is not traditionally popular in Italy. The German-speaking people of Austria—and that now means Germans—are traditional enemies of Italy. Italian cemeteries and Italian churches are full of memorials to Italian men who died in wars against Germany through the whole course of history of the modern Italian state.

The great friends of the Italian Risorgimento were English and French and Polish. I passed a house the other day which was the home of the great Polish poet Mickiewicz, who, the inscription told me, fought for Italy, and a fresh wreath had been hung over the plate. The greatest English poet, since Shakespeare, John Keats, is buried in Rome, as one is daily reminded as one passes the Piazza di Spagna. Shelley and Byron championed the Italian cause, and it was an Englishman, Robert Browning, who wrote "Open my heart, and you shall see graves inside of it, Italy." German men do not live or die for anything but Germany. Nor has Berlin ever offered a haven to exiled patriots as London offered a haven to Mazzini. These are impermissible things that nevertheless play a role in a country as continually conscious of its history as Italy is.

GET HIM to express himself and you will find that the average Italian considers the Germans barbarians—descendants of the warriors of the Teutoburger Wald, described by Tacitus, who dispersed Roman legions and with them civilization—in the Italian concept of civilization.

An Italian may be an ardent Fascist, but certainly does not consider himself a Nazi. Nazism, in his mind, is a second-rate and crude imitation of the Italian invention, combined with a large piece of barbarous bolshevism. Anyone who doubts the feeling ings of the Italian people about the Germans only needs to try talking German on Italian trains. Finally, there is a genuine fear of a triumphant, more powerful Germany.

Historic Antipathy To Germany Still Dormant

THESE ARE political and psychological factors with which Mussolini has had to deal since last August in maintaining his alliance with Germany. But he is dealing with them.

The Fascist Party has been re-organized. The office of the chief of staff and of the secretary for war has been divided. Gen. Pariani has been replaced by Soddi as undersecretary for war, and by Gen. Graziani as chief of staff. The secretary general of the party, Starace, has been replaced by Muti. These changes are popular.

The Fascist militia has been incorporated with the army, one battalion to every two regiments. And the pay of the militia and of the army has been equalized at one lira a day. The carabinieri—the regular police—has been "purged" of most of the youth under the age of 22. All this increases the strength, popularity and prestige of the regime.

The German-Russian pact is being played down. If, as gossip has it, Hitler wanted to be able to announce a Rome-Berlin-Moscow axis, he has been disappointed. But it is quite in the cards that some commercial agreement will be concluded between Italy and Moscow, for there will be nothing new about this. Italy was one of the first countries to recognize Moscow and had far-reaching commercial agreements with her as far back as 1924.

THE PRESS is conducting a pro-German and anti-British and anti-French campaign of unremitting consistency and zeal. Furthermore, if Germany is unpopular with the masses, so is Great Britain. Sanctions are more recent history than the Austro-German oppressions of pre-1914. The Italian press and the German press play hand in hand. Stories like that of the Polish documents and like that of the map in Mr. Reynaud's office shown in the photograph of Mr. Reynaud and Sumner Welles are played up simultaneously and almost in the same words in the Italian and the German press. The co-ordination of propaganda is complete.

World's Mightiest X-Ray for Bureau of Standards

A 1,400,000-volt X-ray tube—most powerful in the world—will be installed shortly in the Bureau of Standards' new high-voltage laboratory on Van Ness street near Connecticut avenue.

The tube, whose creation by the General Electric Co. and the bureau was announced yesterday, stands 28 feet 6 inches above the chamber in which its effects will be studied and it will duplicate the activity of $150,000,000 worth of radium, more than is now in use in the United States.

The tube has been shipped to Washington in huge packing cases, and should be in operation by May 15 for the immediate purpose of measuring X-ray dosages, according to Dr. Lauriston S. Taylor, the bureau's expert on X-ray radiation.

In recent years scientists and technicians have developed X-ray machines many times more powerful than those now in use, but the effect of these machines must be measured accurately before they can be used in medical treatment.

The bureau has standardized dosages—the strength of the X-ray beam plus the time of exposure—up to 400,000 volts for the last 20 years, but the new machines develop about 1,000,000 volts.

The tube is composed of 10 glass cylinders placed end to end. Each contains an electric element supplying 140,000 volts to a beam of electrons passing through it. The electrons start at the top, are given a 140,000-volt boost into the next chamber, and receive nine additional "kicks" until they arrive at the target with their velocity multiplied to 1,400,000 volts.

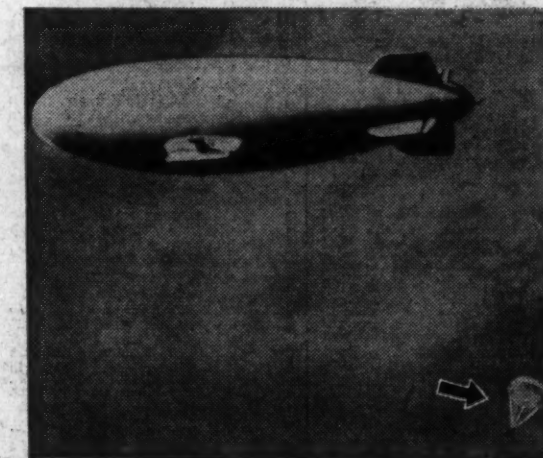

There will also be a tube, Dr. Taylor said, for the production of neutrons whose dosage also will be studied since this kind of ray is being used in medical treatment also.

The laboratory, when fully equipped, will represent an investment of $500,000, Dr. Taylor said. He revealed that in addition to the X-ray tube, similar equipment eventually will be installed—some of it from the New York World's Fair—including a machine carrying as much as 2,000,000 volts.

Boy, 2½, Proves Food Need Not Be Big Problem

Mother Gives Directions for Preparing Delectable Offerings of the Kind That Make Meals an Enjoyable Affair for a Child

By Martha Elynn

DID YOU ever consider what a baby thinks about his cereal and his vegetables, about drinking his quota of milk and eating certain vitamins? In general, what his secret philosophy is on the food he is given to eat?

Recently I visited 2½-year-old Karl McFarland Nations, Jr., arriving just previous to his lunch hour. Karl is a sparkling-eyed, robust and extremely attractive youngster. At the time I arrived he was riding his newest possession, a tricycle. He climbed off without any help and accompanied his mother into the house without the least protest.

That feeding children need not be a problem was shown by the way "Mac," as he is called by his mother and father, climbed into his high chair unassisted and awaited the serving of his food. Although milk is one of his favorite foods—he drinks a quart of homogenized milk a day without any coaxing—he did not drink it first and exclude the other items included in his meal. Baked potato with butter, and carrots served in his favorite way, sliced the length of the carrot, cooked and well buttered, was on his noonday meal. So fond of butter is this young American that he likes it on hot cereals such as oatmeal or wheat cereal.

Eating Is Fun to Him

With "Mac," eating is fun and not a favor to mother. His mother said she was a bit anxious the first time she prepared squash for her son, thinking that it might not appeal to him, but he liked it equally as well as he does carrots, tomatoes, spinach and other vegetables. Orange juice, tomato juice and grapefruit juice all find favor as does fruit cocktail, pears and peaches—but no apricots. Either poached egg or hard-boiled eggs are given to "Mac," and he eats crisp bacon, chicken, broiled lamb chops, steak and liver.

I inquired of Mrs. Nations how she handled her son's food from the time he was a little fellow.

She said that he had strained foods when very young and then she used junior foods that included chopped vegetables and creamed soft foods. She thinks that the ready-to-serve foods packed in tins are a boon to mothers, for when the strained ones are used, it means that one does not have to spend much time mashing, pulping and straining. The junior foods she finds splendid for "Mac" and that they bridged the gap perfectly between baby foods and regular family fare.

A fluffy baked potato topped up with a vegetable topping of strained vegetables is a dish that has often been relished by "Mac."

Baked Potato with Buttered Vegetables

Combine one 4½ ounce can strained vegetables with 1 tablespoon butter and ¼ teaspoon salt. Heat thoroughly. Bake 1 potato and remove center and mash. Season with butter and salt. Refill the shell with mashed potato. Make a depression in center of potato and fill with the strained food. Return potato to oven and brown.

Ice cream has not as yet been included in "Mac's" diet, but he does have fruit sherbet. Peach sherbet is on his preferred list.

Fruit Sherbet

Dissolve 1-3 cup sugar in 1 cup scalded milk. Add 1 cup fruit pulp and ¼ cup orange juice. Whip 2-3 cup cream until stiff. Add 2½ tablespoons lemon juice and whip again. Fold into fruit mixture. Pour in freezing tray of refrigerator. Beat well every half hour until desired consistency. Makes six servings.

That the interest taken in "Mac's" food has been worth the while is very evident. There can be no doubt in the mind of anyone that "Mac" is a very well and happy youngster. His sunny disposition, his red cheeks and bright eyes, and his pep are a constant tribute to his mother's wisdom in feeding him, and the care and training given by both his father and mother.

Food Is Such Fun

Karl McFarland Nations, Jr., in the picture above, is enjoying his lunch as shown by his expression. This healthy and happy youngster has developed excellent food habits under the guidance of his mother. He comes to the table eager for his meal and eats with zest the food set before him. Interesting dishes, a bright bib and food well prepared and attractively served have no doubt contributed the major part to this youngster's enjoyment of his meals.

Cook's Library

"THE EPICURE IN CHINA," giving eight complete Chinese Epicurean dinners, is a book in which all recipes have been faithfully tested and approved by Chinese chefs and gourmets. The success of Chinese food is not accidental. The art of eating among the Chinese has an antiquity commensurate with their whole culture. Their food is simple, it is good and as modern research can affirm, it is nutritionally sound according to food authorities. Eight complete Chinese Epicurean dinners are given in the volume. Its companion book, "The Epicure in Hawaii," and "The Epicure in Mexico" that is to follow this year makes a trio of books worth having in the cook's library. The publisher, The Colt Press, Price, $1.50.

"THE DOMESTIC ARTS COOKBOOK," edited and revised by Ruth Berolzheimer, contains more than 5,000 reliable recipes, and helpful suggestions. It is an encyclopedia of everything pertinent to modern cookery. Photographs and illustrations give a clear picture of the food and its service. An interesting chapter is devoted to wine as used in cooking, with full instructions on the selection, care and serving of it. The floor plans of well-designed and equipped kitchens are included. Thumb index, table of contents, alphabetical index, and the listing of illustrations under subjects make for easy reference. The publisher, Domestic Arts Institute.

You didn't know a duckling could be fried? It is a splendid way to serve the juicy bird. If you are tired of roast duckling and still would like to serve it try the following way.

Fried Duckling
Single and wash a five to six pound duckling. Remove oil sac. Peel off skin and fat from body and legs. It will not come readily from wings. Split down back, remove neck and backbone. Cut off legs, second joints and wings, divide breast into four pieces, removing rib bones. Cook gizzard, heart and neck with bones in seasoned water for gravy stock. Cut skin and fat into small pieces and fry out fat. Dip meat, also halved liver, into one beaten egg combined with three tablespoons milk and salt and pepper and roll in fine seasoned bread crumbs. Brown in fried-out duck fat; pour off excess fat and add two tablespoons water. Cover and cook in slow oven (350 degrees F) for 30 minutes, removing cover during last ten minutes of cooking. Approximate yield: six portions.

Appeal and Flavor

If you like chicken salad, and you don't, try serving it this way next time. Generous slices of chicken blended with mayonnaise, celery too, if desired, seasoned to taste and served on a round of canned cranberry sauce needled in crisp lettuce. Looking for color appeal? This gives it to you and flavor as well.

Spring Brings Welcome Change

Everything seems to lighten up in the spring, including meals. That does not mean we must change our whole scheme in planning meals. But it does mean that a bit of springlike atmosphere is a welcome change from the hearty foods of winter.

For instance, take this meat loaf. In cold weather it is savory served oven-hot, accompanied by gravy and cooked hot vegetables. But for bright springlike days let us bring it to the table sliced cold and garnished with raw green pepper rings and radish roses. Start the meal with a stimulating hot soup, such as chicken soup; end it with fresh fruit, and you have a delicious meal from start to finish—and a satisfying one, too.

Mushroom Meat Loaf

Mix together 1 pound each of ground veal and smoked ham, 4 tablespoons catsup, 4 tablespoons green pepper, finely chopped, 2 beaten eggs, 1 can condensed cream of mushroom soup, 1 small onion, finely chopped, 1 cup fine dry bread crumbs, ¼ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Pack in a loaf pan and baked in a moderate oven, 350 degrees for 1 hour to 1 hour and 15 minutes. Serves 8.

Zabione Is a Delicious Concoction

Zabione
Beat 6 egg yolks slightly in the top of a double boiler before placing over hot water. Add 1 cup granulated sugar, 1 cup sherry wine, place over boiling water and beat with a rotary beater until thick and frothy. Chill and spoon into sherbet glasses lined with thin strips of sponge cake. Serves eight.

Thrifty and Flavorful

If you want a lamb roast that is nutritious, well flavored and economical, try a cushion shoulder cut. The bone is removed from a square shoulder roast and the cavity can then be filled with any savory stuffing. A spiced baked fruit such as prunes, pineapple, apples or apricots go well with this roast.

The Missing Link

Tricky as a Chinese puzzle but no trick at all to make is that combination meat and "tater" all-in-one which goes by the sad name of the "missing link." Wash and pare potatoes. Make a hole through center of each potato with an apple corer (or sharp knife). Push a pork sausage link into each hole. Place the potatoes in a baking dish and bake in a hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit) 1 hour. Serve with butter and honey—and cheers!

Vegetables Julienne

When a recipe calls for "vegetables julienne" it means that the vegetables are cut into thin strips about 2½ inches long and ¼ inch (or less) wide. Beets, carrots, potatoes and other firm vegetables can be cut this way before cooking. Vegetables julienne are very attractive for a change and they also serve as clever platter garnishes and for soups and stews.

Delectable Omelets Are Excellent at Any Type of Meal

Mrs. J. M. Williford Wins First Prize In Post Contest

By The Post Food Editor.

One of the most delectable dishes, as well as one of those high in building material, is a well-made omelet. There are endless variations in the additions that may be made to an omelet. Today's winning Post recipe contestants blend many foods into their omelets to add flavor and distinction. Regardless of the name used for identifying an omelet, it must be remembered that to make a successful omelet it must be mixed quickly, cooked at once, not allowed to cook too long, and served without delay on a hot dish. Here are the prize winners and their entries:

Omelet a la Tegetthoff

First Prize, $3.
Mrs. J. M. Williford,
1312 Tenth street northwest

Recipe—Brown 4 tablespoons flour lightly in 4 ounces of butter and 4 ounces of other fat. Add

MRS. WILLIFORD

3 cups chicken broth and stir until smooth and thick. Have heat low. Add 1 cup green peas, 1 cup chopped green string beans, 2 cups cauliflower buds, no stems, and 1 pound of cooked chicken, chopped coarsely. Add ½ pound mushrooms sautéed in butter. Mix thoroughly and add 2 egg yolks slightly beaten, and 1 gill of cream. Leave mixture in saucepan and place on stove to keep hot. When ready to serve omelet beat 2 eggs thoroughly, 1 teaspoonful melted butter and a few grains of salt. Cook in well-oiled omelet pan over slow fire until eggs get slightly firm on top. Shake pan often so that omelet does not burn. Fold a generous portion of the omelet filling in center of each omelet. Allow 2 eggs for each serving, and the amount of ingredients given for vegetable mixture is for the use of 12 eggs, or six servings.

Orange Breakfast Omelet

Second Prize, $2.
Mrs. Dalton V. Brunson,
611 M street northeast

Recipe—Beat 4 eggs slightly. Add 4 tablespoons milk, ¼ teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon sugar. Put 2 tablespoons butter in omelet pan, when melted turn in egg mixture; as it cooks, lift with spatula, letting uncooked part run underneath until it is all of creamy consistency. Increase the heat so it will brown quickly underneath. Spread with 2 tablespoons orange marmalade, fold, turn, sprinkle with powdered sugar and place on hot platter. Serves four.

Tomato-Asparagus Omelet

$1 Prize
Mrs. T. E. Halligan,
402 E. Franklin street,
Hagerstown, Md.

Recipe—Fry ¼ cup chopped onion in 2 tablespoons butter.

MRS. BRUNSON

When cooked, without being browned, add ½ cup tomatoes, ¼ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Cook mixture until puree is formed. Stir constantly and cool slightly. Then make omelet by using 6 eggs. Separate yolks from whites. Add puree and ¼ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper to beaten egg yolks. Beat whites until stiff and fold into yolk mixture. Fry slowly in well-oiled omelet pan, or place in oven, 350 degrees, until browned. Top with 1 bunch asparagus made with 1 bunch asparagus and 2 cups white sauce. Serves 6.

Mrs. Dalton Brunson Takes Second Award With Orange Formula

1 tablespoon sugar and ¼ teaspoon salt. Beat 1 egg, add ¼ cup milk, 2 tablespoons cream and 2 tablespoons melted butter. Add to dry ingredients, beat with rotary egg beater until smooth. Drop by tablespoons on moderately hot slightly oiled griddle. Turn cakes when bubbles break, bake until golden brown. To serve, place the sausage omelet between 2 pancakes, sandwich style. Serve plain or with syrup. Makes 4 pancake burgers 4 inches in diameter. Sausage omelet: Form two-thirds pound bulk pork sausage into 4 flat cakes slightly larger than pancakes; fry in pan. As soon as omelet is set on under side, place patties in mixture, about 2 inches apart. Cut mixture between patties; lift edges up and over sides and tops of patties. Turn once to brown.

Herb Omelet

$1 Prize
Mrs. Pauline Crow,
1910 T street southeast

Recipe—Beat 6 egg whites until frothy, add ¼ teaspoon salt and continue beating until they form peaks. Beat 6 egg yolks and 6 tablespoons milk together; add ¼ teaspoon each of sage, marjoram and thyme, and fold into egg whites. Melt 1 tablespoon butter in omelet pan placed over low heat. Pour in omelet mixture and cook about 10 minutes or until golden brown. Cut lightly through center and with spatula fold and turn onto a warm platter. Serve at once.

Beans Glorified With Onion Ring Crown

Oven-baked beans take upon themselves new glory when their succulent succulence harmonizes with delicately browned onion rings, as in the attractive dish shown above. To set off its robust qualities, prepare a bowl of crunchy cole slaw bedecked with fresh cucumber pickles. Add to that hot bean muffins, fragrant apple butter and plenty of coffee, and you have a quick meal that sticks to the memory.

Oven-Baked Beans with Onion Rings: Cut one large Bermuda onion into thin slices and separate into rings. Fry in just enough fat to prevent sticking. Move the onions to one side of the pan, then pour the contents of one medium (18 oz.) can oven-baked beans, any style, in other side and heat. Turn the beans onto a warm platter and top with onion rings.

Bondy Chides Capital For Relief Policies

With One Exception, Washington Is Only City Over 300,000 That Does Not Try To Meet Human Needs, Says Welfare Head

By Jessie Ash Arndt

Washington is the only city of over 300,000 population (with one exception) that does not attempt to meet human need, Robert F. Bondy, director of public welfare, declared yesterday. He referred to the arbitrary elimination of "employables" from relief rolls, even though there is no work available to them.

Pointing out that these needy people are members of the District's family, he said it was as though his son were to ask him, "When do we have dinner?" and he were to answer, "Well, we don't eat tonight; there's not going to be any dinner."

Offering painstaking explanations in answer to one or two questions from members of the audience as to isolated instances in which employed persons have falsified regarding their situation in order to get relief, Mr. Bondy said there would always be such cases. There are always those who will take advantage of any situation, he agreed, and pointed out that with 100 cases to every staff member it was impossible to keep track of the families adequately. He added that the maximum case load, set by the Social Security Board is 100.

He spoke yesterday afternoon before the civics education section of the Twentieth Century Club, following its luncheon at the Y. W. C. A. Mrs. Paul J. Everhardt, chairman, and last night before the Home Economics Association, at its dinner at the Admiral Club. Miss Marjorie Heseltine, of the Children's Bureau, presided at the dinner, and Mrs. Helen Weir Martin, assistant superintendent of the public assistance group, led the discussion following Mr. Bondy's talk.

He told the home economics group that if the Commissioners put into effect a plan for a relief milk program, about 8,000 families would be boosted from a third of a quart to one and a fourth quarts daily.

In both talks, he emphasized the fact that the problem of public welfare was not that of public officials who happened at this time to be in administrative positions, but of the citizens of the community. "It is not my problem, but yours and mine," said Mr. Bondy. He added that whatever was done to meet the situation must have its source in the will of the people as a whole, and urged that the women inform themselves as to conditions.

He favored prompt action to meet immediate needs and, for the future, a long-range plan envisioning the total requirements to be worked out in a year by year, pay-as-you-go program. "Government first of all should stand for human welfare," declared Mr. Bondy. "To me that is what government means."

Eunice Harlan Speaks Monday

Miss Eunice Harlan, visiting director for the Eastern area of Beta Sigma Phi, international educational and social sorority, will be guest of honor and speaker at the city-wide cultural meeting to be held Monday at 8 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel. The subject of her talk will be "Goals and Standards of Beta Sigma Phi in Washington." The District of Columbia Council and Gamma, Delta, Epsilon, Eta, Iota, Theta, Kappa, Lambda and Mu chapters will sponsor the meeting, open to members only.

The meeting will be opened by group singing of the sorority songs, accompanied by Miss Elythe Ketchie, of Epsilon, at the piano. Miss Ruth Hill, council president, is in charge of all plans. Miss Harlan has been in Washington for the past three weeks, visiting chapters and conferring with officers and committees, to assist in forming plans for the coming year. She has served as educational director of Kappa Chapter, of Lincoln, Neb., and has worked for international headquarters as organizer, supervised field training for organizers for three years and has worked with chapters in 35 States and in Ontario, Canada. She will be guest at a tea Sunday at the Gill-Bert, 2480 Sixteenth street northwest, and will assist at tea table.

Patriot Group Elects Officers

Indianapolis Woman President, Succeeding Mrs. L. N. Edwards

Mrs. Eugene Haslet Darrach, of Indianapolis, yesterday was elected to a three-year term as national president of the Daughters of Founders and Patriots, succeeding Mrs. Llewellyn N. Edwards, of Washington.

The election took place at the morning session of the general court in the Washington Hotel, and the installation followed in the afternoon.

Other new officers are Mrs. Charles L. Jackson, of Concord, N. H., vice president; Mrs. Clarence J. Chandler, of Detroit, chairman; Mrs. Samuel B. Woodbridge, of the District, recording secretary; Mrs. John Tillinghast Gardner, of East Greenwich, R. I., corresponding secretary; Mrs. Thomas Coke Mell, of Atlanta, Ga., organizing secretary; Mrs. Herbert Eugene McQuesten, of North Andover, Mass., registrar; Mrs. Henry Schorer, of West Hartford, Conn., treasurer; Mrs. Frank Howland Parcells, of Brooklyn, N. Y., historian; Mrs. Maurice Vansant Sweeney, Philadelphia, color bearer; Mrs. James Charles Peabody, of Boston; Mrs. Benjamin F. Buckley, Lexington, Ky.; and Mrs. Harry A. Beckett, of Cleveland, counselors.

A reception was held last night in honor of the retiring and incoming officers, closing the society's annual convocation. Many of the officers and delegates will remain for the D. A. R. and other patriotic organizations' meetings this week and next.

Members of the alumni who will assist are Miss Edna Kelley, Miss Madeline King, Miss Catherine Warner, Miss Sally Jumper, Mrs. Margaret Ladd, the Misses Phillips, Miss Jean Ross Howard, Miss Virginia Walton. The showing is for the benefit of the college.

D. A. R. Citizenship Pilgrims Arriving from 48 States

Mrs. Henry M. Robert, Jr., president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution and members of her cabinet are already in Washington holding informal conferences; yesterday new bells in the D. A. R. carillon at Valley Forge were formally dedicated, and today the Good Citizenship Pilgrims arrive from the 48 States—all stepping up the pace of events prior to the opening of the Forty-ninth Continental Congress of the society at Constitution Hall Monday night.

Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne, of Brookville, Ind., national chairman of the Good Citizenship Pilgrimage Committee, will present the girls to the Congress Monday night and has a full program arranged for them during their visit in Washington as guests of the national society.

Tonight at 9 o'clock the District Good Citizenship Committee, of which Mrs. Roy C. Baker is chairman, will give a reception at the Chapter House, 1732 Massachusetts avenue at 9 o'clock. National officers and committee chairmen and the pilgrims will be guests.

Receiving with Mrs. Bowker and Miss Lillian Chenoweth, state regent, will be Mrs. Robert, Mrs. Russell William Magnus, of Massachusetts, honorary president general; Mrs. William A. Becker, of New Jersey, honorary president general; Mrs. O'Byrne, Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen Rohde, of New York; Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts; Mrs. G. E. Herbert, of Illinois; Mrs. Arthur Thomas H. Seay and Miss Anne Tuohy, of the District, all vice chairmen of the national committee. Mrs. Percy L. Cochran, of Washington, will take the place of Mrs. Charles W. Taylor, who is ill.

Eloise Collingwood, Pilgrim representing the District, will join the girls at the Washington Hotel for the four days of their stay.

Today they will visit Memorial Continental Hall and Constitution Hall, where they will be received by the national officers in the afternoon, preceding the evening reception. Tomorrow will be devoted to sightseeing; Sunday they will be guests of the president general at luncheon at the Mayflower, after attending church services at the Washington Cathedral; will visit Arlington and Mount Vernon in the afternoon and be guests of Mrs. E. H. Whitaker, vice president general, at dinner. Monday night, after a day of sightseeing, they will receive medals at the opening session of the congress. They leave for their homes Tuesday.

The National Officers' Club of the D. A. R., of which Mrs. J. Y. Talmadge, of Athens, Ga., is president, will have its annual meeting today in the D. A. R. board room, with a luncheon following in the banquet hall. Tomorrow night its annual banquet will be held at the Willard Hotel, with George Ross Howard, guest speaker. Marie Coffey, coloratura soprano, will sing. Mrs. George Madden Grimes is chairman of luncheon reservations; Mrs. David D. Caldwell, of those for the banquet, and Mrs. Harry C. Groves with Miss Lillian Chenoweth, is in charge of general arrangements.

Among other national patriotic societies having their annual meetings will be the Daughters of Colonial Wars, of which Mrs. Almerin Marston, of Ventnor, N. J., is president, at the Mayflower Hotel. A tea will be given Sunday afternoon.

Order of distinction—The Knights of the Garter and Bath will have a tea this afternoon at 4 at the Willard. Monday the Descendants of Barons of Runnymede will have their business meeting at 11:30 at the Willard, with luncheon at 12:30. The Dames of the Loyal Legion meet at the Mayflower today and tomorrow with Mrs. David D. Good, national president, presiding.

75th Club to Entertain at Luncheon Thursday in Honor of Mrs. Roosevelt

THURSDAY OF NEXT WEEK the Seventy-fifth Club will entertain at its annual luncheon honoring Mrs. Roosevelt. As is its custom, the club will announce in her honor a gift for a philanthropic project. This time she will be presented with a check to cover transportation expenses to and from school for the young crippled man for whom the club bought a wheel chair a few years ago after his had been stolen.

The next year it provided him school lunches. This year it is paying a man to drive him to and from school and carry him into the building. The gift is made in the name of Mrs. Roosevelt as a tribute to her interest in humanitarian work.

More than 150 will attend the luncheon at which Mrs. Roosevelt will speak, and which will be at the Washington Hotel.

Mrs. Edward Isaac, of California, is general chairman, assisted by Mrs. Lister Hill, Mrs. Charles Leavy, Mrs. Jerry Voorhis and Mrs. Charles Clason.

The ushers will be Mrs. Harry Sheppard, Mrs. Herman Eberhart, Mrs. Edward Rees, Mrs. Bruce Barton, Mrs. George Grant and Mrs. Lyle Borden.

BENEFIT BRIDGE—The alumnae of Marjorie Webster School have announced a benefit bridge at the school for next Wednesday night to raise funds for their pledge to the Jessie Fraser Webster Memorial Fund for the building of a memorial chapel on the school grounds at Seventeenth and Kalmar roads.

Mrs. John MacFarland is chairman. There will be a program including numbers by Jane and June Dollarhide, young N. B. C. artists; Patricia Morales, 10-year-old pianist and reader, and Stanley Miller, who will be presented by Thyllis Wilson Huff, of the alumnae association.

MUSICAL PROGRAM—William Meisell, lyric tenor, student of the Feller Studio of Voice, with Mrs. Feller, will present the program this afternoon at the Congressional Club.

Horticulturists To Meet Here Tomorrow

Garden Club Members From Other Cities Will Attend Luncheon

Many prominent garden club members from other cities will be here tomorrow to attend the annual luncheon and business meeting of the American Horticultural Society at the Shoreham Hotel at 12:30. Chief among them will be Mrs. Francis King, who will be one of the speakers.

Mrs. King is widely known not only for her books on gardening and for her magazine, but also as one of those who launched the garden club movement in this country.

Among speakers will be Mrs. Jerome Coombs, of New York Botanical Gardens, who will talk on the plants of South Africa of which she has made a special study; Frederick Bradford, now in charge of the Plant Introduction Station at Glendale, Md., and Robert Sturdevant, eminent landscape architect.

Count Tolstoy's Granddaughter To Lecture Here

Mrs. Marya A. Tolstoy-Mansvetov will talk on "Czechoslovakia Since Munich" at Pierce Hall, Harvard and Sixteenth streets, tomorrow at 3:30 p. m., under the joint auspices of the Washington Branch of the Czech-American National Alliance and the Current Problems Class of All Souls Church.

Mrs. Tolstoy-Mansvetov is the granddaughter of Count Leo Tolstoy, and herself a poet and writer. She has lived in Czechoslovakia for the past 16 years. Her account of what the Czechs have been experiencing since May, 1938, is based on what she has witnessed and learned from friends. Mrs. Tolstoy-Mansvetov left the German-occupied Czechoslovakia on February 8, 1940, and came to the United States. Tea will be served after the lecture. Mrs. Hurlbut, wife of the Czechoslovak Minister to the United States; Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, wife of the former United States Minister to Czechoslovakia; Mrs. George C. Thorpe and Mrs. J. J. Kral will assist at the tea table.

London Orator To Speak Here

A lecture "Who Are Our Brethren?" by Dr. William E. Orchard, noted author and orator of London, will be given at the Mayflower Hotel, Sunday, April 21, at 8:15 p. m., sponsored by the Catholic Evidence Guild.

While pastor of King's Weigh House, one of the greatest of the Protestant churches in London, a newspaper of that city voted him one of the city's two most eminent preachers. He is also an author of world-wide reputation among churchmen and in 1935 he became a Catholic priest.

Among other national patriotic societies having their annual meetings will be the Daughters of Colonial Wars, of which Mrs. Almerin Marston, of Ventnor, N. J., is president, at the Mayflower Hotel. A tea will be given Sunday afternoon.

Order of distinction—The Knights of the Garter and Bath will have a tea this afternoon at 4 at the Willard. Monday the Descendants of Barons of Runnymede will have their business meeting at 11:30 at the Willard, with luncheon at 12:30. The Dames of the Loyal Legion meet at the Mayflower today and tomorrow with Mrs. David D. Good, national president, presiding.

Dorsey Scores 'Taxing Mania'

Addressing the League of Republican Women at its fortnightly luncheon yesterday, Roscoe J. C. Dorsey, local attorney, attacked the "taxing complex and mania" of the New Deal.

He asserted that, between June 30, 1933, and June 30, 1940, the total expenditures of the Federal Government would be at least $62,500,000,000, while $37,500,000,000 would constitute all the Federal revenues in this period. On a basis of 130,000,000 population, the individual's share is $327.65 and the family of four owes $1,310.60, he said.

Only 2½ per cent of the population pays income tax, he asserted, resulting in the great burden of "secret taxes" falling on the poorer people.

Mexican Ambassador Entertains In Honor of Colombian Envoy

Dr. Turbay Receives Decoration From Dr. Castillo Najera; Guests Served Food and Drinks in the Patio

By Carolyn Bell

Much to the delight of party-loving Washington, the Mexicans entertain at the mere drop of a hat. Yesterday, however, the Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera had a bona fide excuse for the gay reception at the embassy between the hours of 5 and 7 o'clock. The main attraction was the Ambassador from Colombia, Dr. Gabriel Turbay, who received a decoration from the Mexican government, presented by Dr. Castillo Najera.

Arriving much earlier than usual, guests gathered in the embassy salon awaiting the big moment. Finally the Ambassador, surrounded by interested onlookers, presented the yellow-ribbon decoration after a well delivered speech.

Amusing to the guests was the arrival of irresistible "Memo," the Najera's young son, who strode down the middle of the floor during the last part of his father's speech and proceeded to occupy the seat of honor. Dr. Turbay made a brief speech after receiving the decoration. The solemnity of the occasion was dispensed when, after the proceedings were over, the Ambassador said in Spanish "Well, now we should have a little drink."

Naturally all guests agreed and trooped into the spacious dining room and adjacent patio, where food and drink, in a lavish display, were served. The long narrow table was centered with a bouquet of white snapdragons and blue iris. Pouring at one end of the table was Mrs. Rogelio Alfaro, wearing a terra cotta wool ensemble. Also pouring was her sister, Senora Maria Elena Davilla.

Drinks Served In the Patio

Senora Castillo Najera, wearing a smart black tea gown and brilliant combs in her black hair, was here and there to see that everyone was well taken care of. Various salads, lobster, Waldorf and vegetable, adorned the table, as did large platters of ham and sandwiches. Pineapple ice was to be had for the asking along with cake and cookies.

Meanwhile the patio was crowded with guests in search of champagne or Scotch and soda. Chatting together were the Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Cabero. She wore a stunning silver fox cape over her printed frock. Dr. Don Rafael Fuentes, who is to receive a decoration from the Panamanian government shortly, was accompanied by his stunning Senora, who wore a white straw turban atop her black hair. Mrs. Thomas Burke, chic in black and white, was accompanied by her mother, Senora del Pulgar, who has recently come from Mexico City.

Senora de Boyd Attends Party

Greeted on all sides was Senora de Boyd, wife of the newly arrived Minister of Panama. The Commercial Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Campbell, who attended yesterday's party will leave for New York today to visit their son-in-law and daughter, Senor and Senora de Gacitua. Wearing a crisp white hat with her black costume was Senora de Bayle who accompanied the Minister of Nicaragua.

Also there were Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Castro, who wearing a charteruse green print; Mrs. Sol Bloom, in a blue plumed hat and her daughter, Miss Vera Bloom. Mrs. William Conrad, Senora de Pastoriza, wife of the Minister of the Dominican Republic, Senora de Recinos, Paula Hascheer, the Brazilian Ambassador and many more.

Lucile Fogelgren, Dr. Artress Wed

The wedding of Miss Lucile Fogelgren, of Takoma Park, Md., and Mansfield, Ohio, to Dr. H. Elwin Artress, of Riverdale, Md., took place yesterday afternoon at 3:30 in the Review and Memorial Church, Hyattsville, Md.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fogelgren, of Mansfield. She was given away by her father, and wore a costume suit of powder blue sheer wool with tripoint trim and navy accessories. She carried an arm bouquet of orchids and sweetheart roses.

Her only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Paul Roger Cone, of New York, who wore a crepe bolero suit in a dusty pink shade. Dr. Wilfred Eastman, of Norristown, Pa., was best man. Ushers were Val Artress, brother of the bridegroom; Mr. Cone, Robert Reed and Harold Bricker.

After a Southern wedding trip the couple will be at home at 4 Hickory avenue, in Takoma Park, Md.

The bride attended Washington Missionary College in Washington, where she received a degree of bachelor of arts in English last year. Since then she has been associated with the department of copy editing and proofreading at the Review and Herald Publishing Association in Takoma Park. Dr. Artress, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Artress, of Takoma Park, studied at Columbia Junior College here and was graduated from the Atlanta-Southern Dental College in Atlanta. He is now practicing at Riverdale, Md.

Archeologists Hear Smith Talk on Iran

Society Holds Meeting At Textile Museum; Diplomat Attends

The Archeological Society of Washington, which is now in its thirty-ninth season, met last evening at 8:30 at the Textile Museum, lent through the courtesy of George Hewitt Myers.

Myron Bement Smith, honorary consultant in Islamic Archaeology and Art at the Library of Congress, who has won distinction as a scholar and author, and is now publishing the results of a recent Persian exhibition, spoke. He gave an illustrated lecture on "An Architectural Reconnaissance in Ancient Iran." In the absence from Washington of the Iranian Minister, the Secretary and Mme. Hadjeb-Davallou represented that legation.

The president of the Archeological Society, Wade H. Ellis, presided. Mrs. Mitchell Carroll announced as new members the Egyptian Minister and Mme. Hassan, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and Miss Blanche Ramage, of Virginia.

Mrs. Mayo Plans To Open Home For Benefit Tour

Mrs. Sutherland Mayo will open her charming Regency home at 3103 P street for the tour of old Georgetown houses to be held next Friday and Saturday for the benefit of the Social Service Department of St. John's Church in Georgetown.

Others who will show their homes include Mr. and Mrs. Edward Finkenstein, 3028 N street; Mr. and Mrs. Carol Greenough, 1408 Thirty-first street; Mr. and Mrs. E. Cortlandt Parker, 3255 N street; Miss Margaret Fraser, 1409 Thirtieth street; and Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, 2820 Dumbarton avenue.

Mrs. Edwin Watson Is a Patroness

Mrs. Edwin M. Watson is among the patronesses for the concert which Alexander Sklarevski, internationally known Russian pianist, will give next Wednesday evening, in the Hall of Nations, Hotel Washington at 8:30 o'clock.

Other patrons for the occasion include Mrs. Adolph Caspar Miller, Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Moran, Mrs. George Horning, Jr., Princess Ourousoff, Mr. and Mrs. Gerrit S. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Nash, Miss Jean De Lashmuit, Mme. Tamara Dmitrieff, Mrs. Lindsay Russell, Myron Whitney, Mrs. Ridgely Chapline, Miss Margaret Tolson, Miss Rose d'Amore, Miss Betty Baum, Miss Wilma Semple, Mrs. Wilma Flood and Miss Gertrude Effendi.

Mr. Sklarevski will play works by Mozart, Beethoven, Schumann, and Debussy; a group of Russian works by Arensky, Liadov and Scriabin; and a final group of Chopin. During the Easter holidays, Mr. Sklarevski made a brief tour in the South, with several recitals in Charleston, in Florida and in Havana. Reservations for his concert here can be made at Jordan's.

Ready and Waiting for the 'Tally-Ho'

Envoy to Speak At Tulip Fete

The Netherlands Minister, Dr. Alexander Loudon, will speak in New York May 12 at the opening of New York's first tulip festival. He will share the platform with Mayor LaGuardia and Robert Moses, park commissioner of New York.

The tulip festival became possible late last fall when the Netherlands government donated to New York 1,000,000 tulip bulbs and 100,000 hyacinth roots. About nine-tenths of the bulbs were planted in Riverside Park, with the rest in Prospect Park, Brooklyn, and one or two other spots.

Capital Notables To Attend Dance Recital Sunday

Senator and Mrs. Tom Stewart are among the patrons for the dance-lecture recital on Sunday at 4 o'clock at Wardman Park Hotel under the auspices of the Dance Workshop. Evelyn de la Tour, internationally known American dancer, will appear. Ruth Weiner, talented composer who collaborates with Miss de la Tour, will present a unique and varied program, illustrating the difference between "Idea Dance Composition" and "Dance Interpretation of Music."

U. S. Iran Envoy Arrives From Peru

The newly named United States Minister to Iran, Louis G. Dreyfus, Jr., and Mrs. Dreyfus, have arrived here from Lima, Peru, where Mr. Dreyfus was attached to the embassy for six years as counselor.

They are at the Mayflower until tomorrow, when they will return to their home in Santa Barbara, Calif., for a month before going to Tehran.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Ertugun left yesterday morning for a short stay in New York City.

The Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close entertained at a dinner party last night at the legation on Massachusetts avenue. Covers were laid for 24.

Mr. and Mrs. Coleridge Ertz entertained at a dinner party last night in honor of Mrs. Arthur Woods. Guests included the Third Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Anthony Rumold and Martin Roess.

About the Town with
DUDLEY HARMON

BUSES FULL OF TOURISTS hunting for cherry blossoms and plane loads of celebrities coming for tomorrow's Gridiron dinner will not be the only visitors to Washington this week-end. Today will see an influx of music lovers from all over the world, here to attend the ninth Coolidge Festival of Chamber Music which begins tonight at the Library of Congress.

Between concerts the musicians will meet each other and residents of Washington at various parties to be held in their honor. Mrs. Truxtun Beale will give a luncheon for some of them tomorrow and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe also plan to entertain them over the week-end.

BACK TO WASHINGTON from Boston for the festival has come Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge. One of the outstanding patrons of music in the country, she owns a big estate near Pittsfield, Mass. On this estate is a barn, where 22 years ago she installed pews from an old church and began to give concerts of chamber music. So successful were they that some time afterward Henry Hadley established the Berkshire Symphony Festivals, which later were taken over by the Boston Symphony and Serge Koussevitzky and now draw thousands every summer.

Mrs. Coolidge spread her activities to Washington in 1925, donating funds to establish the Coolidge Foundation and build the Coolidge Auditorium at the Library of Congress. The foundation stages the Chamber Music Festivals from time to time—this will be the first in two years.

THERE IS ALWAYS a polite clamor for tickets, as the auditorium seats only about 500 and admittance is by invitation only. Sometimes getting to Buckingham Palace can involve less difficulties than getting a ticket to one of these concerts. Applications are put in a month in advance, and the prized pastebards are supposed to be nontransferable. Mr. and Mrs. Roy Harris are among those coming on for the festival. Mr. Harris is the outstanding young composer whose First Symphony was conducted several weeks ago by Arturo Toscanini in his broadcast.

BARTLETT AND ROBINSON, famous duo-pianists who played at the British Embassy relief concert last month; Joseph Szigeti, violinist, and Yves Tinayre, French barytone, who has revived the old troubadour songs, are among other celebrated musicians who will be here.

Members of the Pro-Arte Quartet, of Belgium; Publisher Walter Kramer, and Ralph Kirkpatrick, who runs the Williamsburg Festival, also will be here. Coming from New York is Mrs. Claude Beddington, of London, a conservative member of the International set. From one of England's foremost families, she tells stories and sings songs in dialect. Sir Mortimer Durand, British Ambassador here during Theodore Roosevelt's administration, was her great-uncle.

MRS. COOLIDGE is herself a fine pianist and has performed with many leading quartets. Though now quite deaf, she still plays beautifully. Every year, on her birthday, the Coolidge Quartet gives a special serenade in her honor, and over 20 American composers have dedicated their works to her. In the Coolidge Auditorium hangs a Sargent portrait in charcoal of its founder.

ANOTHER BIG EVENT of interest both to society and music circles is the dinner to be given in honor of Dr. Hans Kindler on Monday evening by the Walter Bruce Howes. The National Symphony Orchestra Association and the musicians seemed to have reached an impasse in their fight over wages, and it looks as though Sunday afternoon's concert would be the last.

"But we don't want our dinner to be a wake," says Mrs. Howe. "After all, we really have something to celebrate in that the orchestra has maintained nearly ten years of solid achievement."

Mrs. Harriman's Daughter Here

Mrs. Harriman Russell has arrived in Washington and is staying with Mrs. Nicholas Longworth.

The daughter of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Russell came here to keep in close touch with news of her mother, who is our Minister to Norway. Mrs. Russell is known as a writer of movie scenarios under the name Ethel Borden.

Two Sisters Visit Mrs. William P. James

The Rev. and Mrs. William Pence James, of Charlotte avenue, East Riverdale, have as their guests Mrs. James' sisters, Mrs. M. E. Ward and Mrs. W. T. Trewyn, of Peoria, Ill.

Mrs. Trewyn, Mrs. Ward and Mrs. James, with Miss Janet M. James have gone to Basking Ridge, N. J., for a few days' visit at their family home.

Smart Cars Almost Block R Street As Butlers and Mrs. Robbins Entertain

R STREET, near Sheridan Circle, was practically blocked the other bright spring afternoon by shining, important looking cars, when the Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. Neville M. Butler and Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins were entertaining just across the street from each other. The cars themselves seemed to be holding a reception as they were parked and unparked with leisurely courtesy, and among them the smart DPL 1 of the Peruvian Ambassador, dean of the corps, took precedence.

The Peruvian Ambassador himself was chatting in his pleasant manner to various pretty ladies in Mrs. Robbins' drawing room. Mrs. Warren Barbour, wearing a cocky white straw hat with touches of red, conversed with Mrs. Peter Golet Gerry, while nearby was Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg.

Others were Mrs. Hallett Johnson, charming in gray; Mr. and Mrs. Basil Huter, Baroness de Gruben, Mrs. Philip Coffin, Donna Julia Brambilla, Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell, Countess von Rechteren Limpburg, Mrs. Emory Sands, Ulysses Grant Smith, George Garrett and Robert Coe.

Across the street, with much coming and going between the two parties, the Butlers entertained some of their friends in the attractive house which they have leased from Miss Ruth Hitchcock. Mrs. Butler, who is lovely in a way all her own, wore a striped length frock of deep rose. The two schoolgirl daughters of the house, the younger in pigtails, the older the image of her father, came in to be introduced.

THE BRITISH ENVOY, the Marquess of Lothian, paid a long call on the Butlers as did many of the embassy staff. Among them were Capt. and Mrs. Curzon-Howe, Mr. and Mrs. Hoyer Millar, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sims-Mitzi, and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, who is in a little hat of pale blue flowers, despite worry over her family in Denmark; Angus Malcolm and John Foster.

Other guests of the Butlers were the Canadian Minister, the Minister of South Africa, and Mrs. Close, the Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi, Senora de Cardenas, Lady Gainsborough with her daughter, Lady Maureen Noel; the Counselor of the Australian Legation, Keith Officer; the Counselor of the Swedish Legation, Folke Wennerberg; Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis, the Counselor of the Polish Embassy, Jan Drohojowski; Count and Countess Lascelles; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock, Miss Marjorie Trumbull and Mrs. Wainwright Abbott.

gown of red printed silk draped like a sari. Above her forehead she wore a single ruby which she said was her "caste mark." The Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straeten-Ponthoz, the latter becomingly sun-tanned, were the ranking guests.

THE LARGE COMPANY dined at two round tables of teakwood, which were effectively decorated with white tulips and snapdragons. Among the ranking guests were Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, the Minister of Yugoslavia Mme. Fotitch, the latter handsome in sheer black with panels of gold lace, the Minister of Nicaragua and Mme. de Bayle, the Rumanian Minister and Mme. Irimescu, she in mauve lace, and the new Charge d'Affaires of Luxembourg and Mme. Le Gallais. Others were the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry F. Grady, the counselor of the Argentine Embassy and Mme. Bunge, Mr. and Mrs. James Clemen Dodge and the Minister Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Konder.

Miss Tweed Plights Troth

Of interest to society in Washington is the forthcoming marriage of Miss Katherine W. Tweed and Archibald B. Roosevelt, Jr., which will take place May 18 at the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Transfiguration in Manhattan.

Mr. Roosevelt is a nephew of Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, of Washington. His grandmother is Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, of Oyster Bay, Long Island, widow of the President, and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald B. Roosevelt, of Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island.

The bride-to-be is the daughter of Harrison Tweed, of New York, and of Countess Eleanor Palffy, of Boston and Paris. She is a great-granddaughter of the late William Brewster, of New York, a Senator from New York.

Mr. Roosevelt is an alumnus of Groton School and was graduated last year magna cum laude from Harvard, where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. He won a Rhodes scholarship from Massachusetts, but owing to the war could not avail himself of its privileges, and is now working on a New York newspaper.

BUTTERFLY—Virginia Barry (below) plays at social butterfly before the Shoreham's ram-part. This vivacious young dancer wears clothes like this Eisenberg costume with a flair. For lighter moments this is a beguiling outfit, since both coat and matching dress are of a delicate sea foam green. The lightweight wool of the coat features a raised horizontal stripe in contrast to the smooth surface of the silk crepe dress. The frock follows the coat's silhouette with tailored buttons and a gently flaring skirt.

BUSINESS WOMAN—Mrs. Marjorie Austin (above) plays the part of career woman here, although the herself is a successful young wife and mother. She wears such a judicious navy and white costume as many a young executive chooses for her spring activities. It is one of the collection of Eisenberg designs sponsored by a local shop, and stresses the quiet detail preferred by women of restraint. The cool white batiste and lace blouse is finely tucked at the navy crepe skirt and hip-length jacket.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Helped by Family During Lean Years of Widowhood, Woman Turns Ingrate, Slight Parents After Advantageous Second Marriage; Sister Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Several years ago I lived with my widowed sister, doing everything in my power to help her and her two sons. She never had a pleasing disposition, but as she was the eldest of seven children, all of us more or less catered to her always and tried to please her. After she was widowed, the entire family, including father and mother, spent a great deal of time and money helping her. But of course, I gave most, as I lived with her. In due time, she married again and now she is very well off, financially.

This past winter, I took an apartment and my parents came to stay with me. They had rented out their home in another city, which gave them a nice little income. My apartment lease expired March 1 (as I was sub-letting) and my parents decided to stay with my sister, who has a huge house, until June 1, when their house would be available.

At the urgent request of my brother-in-law, who is an ideal husband and wonderful person, they went to my sister's home March 1, planning to remain for three months. They had hardly arrived when my sister began treating them abominably. They are quite elderly and of late, they seem to have developed a fear of my sister. She shuts off the heat unless company is expected and in many little ways has made life so miserable for them that they are leaving her home this week.

I spent Sunday afternoon with them, but my sister didn't speak a civil word to them while I was there, and when she did speak, it was to berate father for some slight offense. I was so incensed that I could not trust myself to say anything to her. I simply can't hold my own in an argument with her when I am angry. At any rate, I left without taking tea with them—as I usually do—and I overheard my sister telling her husband that he must have made me angry. (One of her favorite tricks is blaming others for her own misdeeds.)

Should I let the matter drop? Should I let my parents return home without exposing my sister to her husband?—(since he doesn't know why they are leaving.) I have written other members of the family at home, advising them of the true reason for our parents' return, as father and mother never would tell. Hereafter, I have "covered up" much of my sister's meanness, but her recent behavior has turned me against her and I feel she should be exposed.

Should I write my brother-in-law a letter, explaining that I am not angry with him, but with sister? Shall I write my sister, telling her exactly what I know about this matter, how utterly contemptible she has acted, and how I feel toward her? Or should I let the matter slide, as has been my custom? M. H. N.

Give Praise and Blame Where They Are Due

DEAR M. H. N.: Because of your brother-in-law's gross attitude toward his wife's story, I think he is entitled to know that he stands high in their regard. In view of the estrangement that threatens, I think it quite in order for you to write him a note, exonerating him of any blame and placing the guilt squarely on your sister's shoulders where it belongs. You might even say that you overheard her remark that "he must have made you angry"—when you decided to leave before tea—and explain that buck-passing is a habit with her, but that nothing she says should ever persuade him that he is not greatly liked and respected by the whole family and deservedly so.

In my opinion, your sister ought to be verbally spanked by a family spokesman. Her treatment of her parents has been outrageous. If your sister's story is true, since her memory of past favors from her family is so short, she should be reminded of them in some detail; and the family's record of generous helpfulness weighed against her own ingratitude and performance of recent years. Tell her plainly what (in your words), you "know about this matter, how utterly contemptible she has acted, how you feel about the matter," and the steps you are taking to acquaint other properly interested persons with her ugly behavior toward her parents.

You might say a good word for her husband, in passing—perhaps repeating in effect what you have remarked to him in separate inclosure—so that she cannot possibly construe him as equally indicted. If such an arrangement does not induce sincere repentance and improved behavior, I think the family would be justified in "boycotting" her in future, in the sense of leaving her severely alone. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Women's Page.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, April 11.

IT WAS A mighty big night on Forty-seventh street, just west of Broadway. Limousines spilled ermine

For Princess Ethel Barrymore was opening in a new play in her namesake theater.

The play, also, was a tickler, for it was "An International Incident," first play by Vincent Sheean, the talented reminiscence reporter in distant spots. So the curtain whisked up, there was some amusing foreshadowing by stage newspapermen, and then the princess made a good, old-time Barrymore entrance—regal, looking exceptionally beautiful for all her 60 years, and wearing a superb negligee. It was a great moment, I tell you. Say what you like about those Barrymores, when they make entrances they are knock-outs. And it was great to see Ethel playing herself, and not old Granny, 101, as she did in "Whiteoaks."

It's futile to say that the princess isn't beautiful. Maybe not, in the strongest sense of the word, but like all great troupers, she can give the illusion of being the loveliest thing afoot. Look at Helen Hayes. That darling is actually plain, but if she didn't convince thousands that she was a rearing beauty in "Mary of Scotland," I'll eat your new spring pill-box. So La Barrymore worked her magic on us through a pretty thin-skinned comedy, using all the art and trickery she has learned in over 40 years of socking the buskin. It was a treat, friends.

The figure boys say it is the first time two of the Barrymores have appeared simultaneously in Times Square for 17 years. Well, can't we get Lionel, too?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Speaking of theatrical families, there is another one here which is equally famous in a smaller way. This is the noted Adler clan, which had its beginnings in the Jewish theater, on the Lower East Side. Its head was Jacob, idol of the area, and his children and their cousins carry on the Adler tradition. Among them are Luther, star of "Golden Boy" and husband of Sylvia Sydney; the beautiful Stella, also prominent on the English-speaking stage, and Celia, whom I saw as the loveliest of all Jessicas in Belasco's production of "The Merchant of Venice" for Warfield. Stella is once more in the Jewish theater, having just opened in a new piece downtown. Fascinating tribes, theatrical families.

The Gentler Sex

By MALVINA LINDSAY

Confession

A most indiscreet woman is Mrs. O'Leigh. She gets herself everywhere talked about. Yet if opportunity came my way, I'd do the very same things, no doubt.

Today's Social Notes

(From The Truth-Teller Torch.)
Slipping into town last night under cover of darkness, Mrs. Erasmus Echo, has reopened her town house. Mrs. Echo's secret entrance was occasioned by the fact that a slight indisposition had forced her to remain in the South after the close of THE season.

The benefit sponsored by Mrs. Mortimer Bigwigger has been postponed until next fall as Mrs. Bigwigger forced to leave hurriedly for New Mexico with Snoozie, her pet Pekinese, who developed acute sinus trouble.

Marathon

Dashing in for a cup of tea yesterday at the Chumley reception were Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Sprint, who had just raced over from a preview at the Neo-Bombardier Art Studios. The Sprints previously had rushed from an exhibit of early Hill-Billy folk art at the Hotel Rocco. From the Chumley reception they hurried to the Poplin cocktail party and from there were intending to speed to the Elderberry Blimp's house-warming and from there to scurry home to get ready for the Cecil Pell-Mell dinner.

Repertoire

Mrs. Casimer Chitterling (the former Phyllis Preener) is in Reno seeking a divorce. The Preener-Chitterling wedding, a year ago, was the most spectacular social event of the season, there being 12 bridesmaids, a band, a dancing pavilion, and a $1,000 wedding cake. The year previous, the bride had been presented to society at a $10,000 debut party. The year before that she had been chosen the Queen of Beauty at Miss Gimlet's finishing school. Upon her return from Reno, Mrs. Chitterling, it is understood, will take the leading part in a pageant benefit to be presented by a group of socialites. She is also taking with the idea of becoming a night club singer.

Suburban Notes

Mrs. Ignatius Goodheart is seeking homes for six of the seven kittens born to her cat, Madame DuBarry, two weeks ago. Madame DuBarry came to the Goodheart home two months ago and refused to leave. Mrs. Goodheart reports that the kittens are very unusual and she is sure their father was a Persian, an Angora or a Manx. She also is of the opinion the kittens are all males, due to their aggressiveness about their feeding.

Mrs. H. Rowland Wiser will give a birthday party tomorrow afternoon for her small son, Junior. Most of Junior's toys were demolished last week-end by his young cousin, Buster Jitters (Mr. Wiser's sister's child) who was here visiting with his parents.

Mrs. Petticord Piney also is planning a birthday party for her twin daughters, Angelina and Adelaide, who will be six months old Monday. Mrs. Piney has recently moved into a new home with a large nursery which she is furnishing.

Mrs. Cranberry Jellicoe also expects to hold a birthday party next week-end for her small grandson from Peoria, whom she will keep while his parents spend several weeks in New York.

Your Figure, Madame

Mayor LaGuardia Warns Designers Against 'Waspline'

THE AMERICAN man is known far and wide as a silent, long-suffering onlooker in the matter of feminine styles. But when he puts his foot down, the effect is electrifying. And from what Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia had to say to the Fashion Group in New York the other day, the masculine foot is poised for the down step!

Mayor LaGuardia warned the designers not to attempt the "waspline" for the American woman. By waspline his Honor meant the lacing, pinching, squeezing and semi-suffocation that got grandma's waist down to 18 inches. If they try it, he declared, they will stir up the health department of every city in the country! He meant it, too.

Exercise Advocated

But you can have a small waist with the approval of the health department—if you nip it in with exercise. In fact, if the Government takes over waistline supervision, a daily half-dozen will no doubt be prescribed to keep you trim and fit.

A girl should only be expected to put the smooth finishing touch on the figure. The real work should be done with exercise. The most effective waistline exercises combine stretching with twisting and bending, as in the following:

POSITION: Stand on knees on floor, legs together, arms stretched high overhead with hands clasped.

MOVEMENT: Continue the upward stretch of the trunk muscles as you bend at the waist to the right and sit down on the floor.

at the left side of the legs. Use hip and waist muscles to pull yourself up to starting position and bend at waist to left as you sit down on floor to right of legs. Do the exercise slowly and accurately. Repeat ten times. This is one of the best of the midriff exercises.

The second exercise makes use of the acute sideward bend to slim the waist. Use a sawed-off broomhandle or the handle of the carpet sweeper as a wand. If you want to lose your waistline roll, here's the exercise that will help you do it.

POSITION: Stand on knees on floor, arms stretched high overhead, holding wand. Have the hands shoulder-width or more apart.

MOVEMENT: Bend sideways,

Reduce Waist By Exercise, Not Lacing

try to touch tip of wand to the floor at the left. Return to beginning position, stretch upward, and bend to the right. It is easier to do this exercise if the knees are apart. Do the exercise very slowly, repeating 12 times.

Turn Nerves Into Charm

A SIMPLE DINNER party—and she is in a frenzy, stewing over this and that as if life depended on it.

A pity when the nervous type lets energy get so badly out of control. For the well-adjusted neurotic has a vitality, a keenness and sensitivity that win success, friends. She is much more charming than placid types.

But if you too frequently get in a state of tension, you become more and more jittery, a victim of exhaustion or nervous indigestion, perhaps a breakdown. Learn how to conserve and control your precious energies, build a reserve that you can draw on for the joyous and creative activities of life.

How to safeguard your vitality? That depends principally on the sort of person you are. You may be the too-active type. You hurry and worry, you take all the responsibility for everything, cram your day with duties and obligations. Your type needs to practice taking it easy. Let others do some of the work. Relax. Get plenty of sleep.

Or you may be the repressed, introspective type. You let your imagination run away with you, magnifying mere trifles into major tragedies.

You need to find more outlets for your energy. Get a dog and go walking every day. Make new friends. Learn to play the piano or to dance.

By such simple tactics, you outwit your nerves, adjust yourself to happier living. In our 40-page booklet, "How to Avoid and Overcome Nervous Troubles," a well-known psychiatrist explains the causes of "nerves," discusses such symptoms as insomnia, exhaustion. Tells how to get at the root of nervous troubles, regain energy, poise.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "How to Avoid and Overcome Nervous Troubles," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Group Votes To Retain D. C. Board

Proposes Aide
Instead of City Manager, Kills
Tax Department

By James D. Secrest

The Kennedy sub-committee on District reorganization last night in effect voted to retain the Board of Commissioners and to add an administrative assistant rather than a city manager in approving a compromise reform bill.

Chairman Ambrose Kennedy (Democrat), of Baltimore, explained that the action is subject to approval of the full sub-committee which will meet early next week. Only Kennedy and Representative Everett M. Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, were present last night. The only major change made in the bill introduced by Kennedy on February 21 was to eliminate the department of taxation and to place the assessor's and tax collector's office under the department of finance. This bill was based on the recommendations of the Commissioners' "kitchen cabinet."

Amendments Ruled Out

While Kennedy pointed out that final action has not been taken on the questions of local reorganization and the creation of a citizens' advisory council, other members indicated that both amendments have been ruled out definitely.

Present at last night's executive session, which continued for three hours, were Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, Jr., Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways; Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission; and J. V. Morgan, sole member of the Board of Tax Appeals.

Kennedy said while the subcommittee followed the general recommendations of the Commissioners with regard to the administrative assistant, rather than the city manager proposal of the Griffiths plan, it was decided to raise the qualifications of the job.

Seek "Qualified" Man

"We want to get a highly qualified man with experience in municipal management for the job," Kennedy explained.

The administrative assistant, whose salary was not fixed, would be appointed by the Commissioners. He is authorized to make studies of the departmental set-up and advise the District heads on administrative changes in the interest of economy and efficiency.

Kennedy expressed the opinion that this study will enable the Commissioners to continue the streamlining of the city government even after the reorganization bill becomes a law.

The compromise measure now provides for 11 municipal departments: Finance, law, engineering, personnel, police, fire, health, insurance, public welfare and vehicles and traffic.

The powers of the Commissioners are broadened substantially and provision is made for the submission of the municipal budget directly to Congress rather than to the Budget Bureau.

New Posts Created

Two new positions, besides that of administrative assistant, are created by the bill. They are directors of finance and personnel.

Sixteen professional boards are abolished and their functions are taken over by the department of licenses.

A distinctive municipal civil service system is created by the bill and the pertinent provisions of the Hatch Act barring political activities of District employees are incorporated.

Despite the lateness of the session, District officials expressed renewed hope that the legislation will be enacted into law before Congress adjourns. Shorn of its most controversial features, the bill is expected to encounter little opposition either in committee or on the floor.

Chairman William H. King, of the Senate District Committee, has indicated he will expedite the measure once it passes the House.

Luck Aids the Law

Charles H. Dean, 24, of Alexandria, Va., was arrested yesterday on a charge of driving without a license after he was reported missing. He was arrested by Park Policeman W. R. Lutes for a minor traffic violation.

An hour later Mrs. Vera Haft, of 3537 Georgia avenue northwest, reported her auto missing. It was the auto Dean was driving. He was then charged with unauthorized use of an auto.

Three Boys Injured as Bus, Bicycle Crash

Motorcycle Hits Car
Of Panama Envoy

Three boys were in Casualty Hospital last night, one severely hurt, following a collision with a bus at Twentieth and Monroe streets northeast yesterday.

The boys, all were riding the same bicycle. John Fletcher, 12, of 2015 Jackson street northeast, was operating the bike, who was perched on the handle bars, suffered injuries to the head and neck. His condition was said to be serious.

STANLEY
The others, Raymond Daniels, 14, of 2045 Jackson street northeast, who was riding on the rear fender, and Stanley Heddings, 15, of 2934 Vista street northeast, who was guiding, received cuts and bruises. They were admitted to the hospital, though doctors said their condition was not serious.

Mrs. Merrill Heddings, mother of Stanley, said her son was bound for Taft Junior High School and that he always walked with the Daniels boy. Apparently, she said, they met John Fletcher and decided to ride.

The bus, police reports stated, was operated by Charles R. Snuffer, 30, of 4602 Quarles street northeast. He was released in custody of a Capital Transit Co. attorney pending the outcome of the boys' injuries.

A car knocked him from his bicycle at Florida avenue and First street northwest last night. The car was operated by Jimmy Rothan, 38, of 501 Florida avenue northwest.

A colored delivery boy was injured yesterday when he lost control of his motorcycle and crashed into the automobile of Dr. J. E. Boyd, Ambassador from Panama, which was parked in front of the embassy at 1355 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

The victim, Roy Carter, 33, of 936 N street northwest, was taken to Emergency Hospital where doctors said he had injuries to his face, chest and right leg.

Dr. Boyd's car, unoccupied at the time, was knocked onto the sidewalk by force of the impact.

Riverside Stadium Becoming Arena For Circus Monday

Conversion of Riverside Stadium into an arena in preparation for opening of the Frank Wirth Circus Monday night was underway yesterday, while officials of Children's Hospital, sponsors of the show, announced seat sales were making progress.

Monday night, when the circus will give the first of 14 performances, has been designated District night, dedicated to official Washington. Tuesday will be gala night, and Wednesday a night for Government employees. Thursday night will be for business and professional clubs, blocks of seats having been taken by Rotary, Kiwanis, Civitan, Cosmopolitan, Reciprocity, Georgetown Lions, Monarch, Optimist and American Business clubs and the Knights of the Round Table.

A dinner party will be given before the show by the National Savings & Trust Co. Employees Club for the directors and their wives. The host and hostess will be Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Baird. Friday night will be for the Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

Finalists Get $1,000 Each
A jury had selected Rudolph Evans, Rudolf Jossot, Sidney Waugh, A. A. Weinman, William Zorach and Lawrence as finalists. These received $1,000 each to prepare additional models, then Lawrence's entry was recommended by the jury, whose members were Henri Marceau, chairman; James Arle Fraser and Heinz Warneke.

But the jury reported: "On first glance it (Lawrie's design) is disappointing because of the inadequacy of the likeness and of the detailed form in the legs and hands, and the extreme emaciation of the figure. But when these points are developed, it will undoubtedly be the most original, the best in character, and will have the finest show and promise and, for this reason will look very imposing silhouetted through the four openings against the sky, a most important point."

"It distinctly carries throughout the movement of the philosopher and thinker. In its favor, also, is its relation to the hall and dome."

Competition Anonymous
Giboney said the commission decided that Lawrie, "with due compensation," should be asked to submit a revised sketch model within three months embodying the modifications sought by both the jury and the memorial group. The competition was anonymous and not until the final choice was made was the artist's identity known.

The sum of $60,000 is available for execution of the bronze statue, including its casting and the cost of the competition. Giboney stated it is hoped to have the work finished in time for dedication on April 13, 1943, the bicentennial of Jefferson's birth.

Hospital Aid For Injured Pupils Urged

Asks Treatment
For Children
Hurt at School

Legislation to provide for the treatment of children injured at school was proposed last night by the Congress Heights Citizens Association.

A resolution advocating such treatment was introduced by Louis Gelberman, president of the association. The group, meeting in the Congress Heights School, adopted it.

"Hospitalization for boys and girls hurt while at school should be provided through public facilities," Gelberman said, "because at present injuries to children frequently incur costs that parents cannot bear."

Other adopted resolutions opposed the House bill authorizing barber shops to set a standard price for haircuts; endorsed proposed measures authorizing investigation of small loan companies; opposed the Randolph bill raising the District's gasoline tax.

American U. Park

The American University Park Citizens Association last night requested a new police station in the community at its regular meeting in Hurst Hall on the American University campus.

Officers of the organization were authorized to take up with the Public Utilities Commission the question of extension of bus service beyond Ward circle during hours of the day, after a report of the Capital Transit Co. said that such an extension was not feasible.

The association unanimously opposed an application for a liquor license in the 4800 block of Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Georgetown Business Men

Any further restrictions on parking along M street in Georgetown were opposed last night by the Georgetown Business Men's Association meeting last night at 1237 Wisconsin avenue. Copies of the resolution will be sent to Traffic Director Van Duzer and the Traffic Safety Council and to the Arlington County Civic Federation, which recently urged an M street parking ban.

The association approved the Sheridan bill to investigate small loan companies and asked that Ensign Company No. 5 and Truck Company No. 3 not be combined as suggested in the fire economy plan.

Another resolution asked the National Park and Planning Commission to reserve conditions in the neighborhood of Twenty-seventh and O streets northwest with a view to changing the playground there from colored to white.

Police Boys Club

Drive Passes
Half Way Mark

More than $45,000 of the $86,000 campaign goal of the Police Boys Club was reported at the close of yesterday. The campaign ends Monday.

Campaign Chairman Mack L. Langford expressed the hope that at today's report luncheon held at 12:30 p. m. at the Cosmos Club a total of $55,000 would be reported. The Rt. Rev. James Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will address the luncheon gathering today.

President Morris Cafritz declared yesterday he believes the drive "has a good chance of going over the top" by Monday's closing date. Last night the Illinois State Society announced it would sponsor a benefit for the Police Boys Club at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday (April 17) at the Shoreham Hotel.

A group from the Boys' Club Band will give a brief concert and novelties will be sold at both, under direction of Mrs. Scott Lucas, wife of the Illinois Senator.

Several minor amendments were offered by Albert F. Jordan, superintendent of insurance. No opposition was voiced to the general provisions. D'Alessandro said another hearing will be held next Thursday.

Film Man Asks Child Actor Rule Revision

Seeks Permission
For More Than Two Performances a Day

A request that the Board of Education's amendment to the child labor law be revised again to permit juveniles of 14 or older to appear on the stage more than twice daily seven days a week was made yesterday at a hearing held by a subcommittee of the House District Committee.

A Julian Brylawski, representing the Motion Picture Theater Exhibitors, asked for the change so that juveniles could appear in vaudeville performances.

He said he would not object if the daily or weekly hour limitations were lowered as the total daily performances of a juvenile in vaudeville would not cover more than an hour.

Chairman Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, agreed to keep open the record of the hearing until next Thursday after spokesman for several social welfare and civic organizations complained they had not had time to examine the Board of Education's compromise plan.

Among the witnesses were Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, of the Welfare Council and the League of Women Voters; Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, of the Kalamazoo Citizens Association; Representative Thomas D'Alessandro, Jr. (Democrat), of Maryland, held a brief hearing on a bill to modernize the law regulating marine, fire and casualty insurance companies.

Western High Cadets Win Drill Title

Marching under the United States Army's new streamlined, simplified drill regulations, Western High School's Fourth Regiment yesterday won first place in the annual Cadet regimental competition held at Central High School stadium before 5,000 spectators.

Led by Lieut. Col. Richard Evans, the winning Western contingent scored 86.5 points to recapture the title won last year by Roosevelt.

It was only a one-point margin victory as McKinley's Second Regiment, under Lieut. Col. Jesse R. Watt, and Roosevelt's Fifth Regiment, under Lieut. Col. William Warner tied for second place with 85.5 points. Woodrow Wilson's Sixth Regiment led by Lieut. Col. Harold W. Trease Jr. was next with 83.5 points.

McKinley came back in the band competition, however, when its Second Regiment Band, directed by Cadet Capt. Jack R. Cranford, won by a comfortable margin with 87.67 points. Second place went to Roosevelt's Fifth Regiment Band, directed by Cadet Capt. James White, which scored 83.33 points.

For the first time in his experience as director of the competition, Col. Wallace M. Craigie, professor of military science and tactics for cadets in District schools, announced a triple tie for third place in the band competition. Woodrow Wilson's Sixth Regiment, and Western's Fourth Regiment.

Brown Reminds Police
To Obey Traffic Laws

In a brief but pointed memorandum yesterday, Maj. Ernest W. Brown reminded his minions that they must obey as well as enforce District traffic regulations.

The order: "The attention of headquarters has been called to the fact that police officers driving cars do not give the prescribed hand signal. You will bring this to the attention of all members of your command and see that they comply with the regulations when driving automobiles."

Teamelin Wins Feature Fifth Race by Half Length at Bowie

Steel Knight Second, Third Toln Memory

Winner Pays $6.60 As Second Choice; 7,500 Witness Day's Sport Under Sun

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., April 11.—A pair of apprentice jockeys and two 5-year-old mares hooked up in a stretch duel in the best race on today's program and the combination of Miss M. J. Christmas and Teamelin won the second choice at $6.60.

Weather and track conditions were ideal for the sport of kings, queens and guys. A crowd of 7,500 witnessed the action and saw Teamelin, a daughter of the late Sir Teddy, run the 6 furlongs in 1:14.

My Lawyer was first to show in front as Starter Jim Milton pressed the button releasing the stall doors. Steel Knight went right along with the leader with Teamelin, being tailed in fourth position and on the outside. Approaching the stretch, Teamelin broke from the sponge and began to fade. Steel Knight then opened a good lead as Weber turned Teamelin loose. The Teddy mare responded willingly to a drive.

Teamelin was unable to help Steel Knight and Teamelin was on the way to a daylight lead as the pair went over the line.

Redwell Saddles Another

Trainer Guy Redwell added another winner to his growing string when he saddled Distant Star for John E. Hughes and the daughter of Dr. Freeman, turned back 11 other juveniles over the half-mile course. Jockey H. Lindberg brought the filly home two lengths ahead of Codoli with Bright Harvest third. The winner was second choice to Codoli by a slight margin and paid $7.60.

A $17.50 payoff was in order in the daily double when the filly's jockey clicked with Mrs. A. J. Abel's Grand Duke. The ancient gelding came to the wire a length and a half in advance of Adoli, which was unable to get a good start.

Experienced riding by Apprentice E. Suttle, Jada was third in the limit field of a dozen plater sprinters. The winner paid $5.50.

Signar Wins

The third race was one of the roughest of the meeting. Prince Turkey, which finished second, came around the outside and pinned up horses on the way to the stretch. The winner was Cherachin and again the public choice followed hard reason to cheer. Signar, Billy paying $3.70, among others, Amerlee, Romney Royal, Sport Steel and Backtime had to be pulled up at some stage of the running. Romney Royal recovered in time to be third.

Signar added another winner to the record of P. F. Dwyer, leading trainer at the meeting.

G. U., Maryland, George Washington Nines Play Here Today

Hoyas Host To Lafayette In Feature

Maryland Entertains Michigan; Colonials Meet Richmond Nine On East Ellipse

College baseball teams from north, south and west invade District and nearby diamonds today, with Georgetown's undefeated nine host to Lafayette in the feature at 2:30 p. m. on the medical school field.

Maryland will entertain Michigan in a 4 o'clock tilt at College Park, while the third game is George Washington vs. Richmond at 2:30 p. m. on the East Ellipse.

A pair of tennis matches are offered as side attractions. West Virginia visiting Georgetown at 2:30 on the Hilltop courts, where Coach Tom Mangan unveils his first Hoya net team. Maryland's racketmen meet Richmond at 3:30.

Smith, Dieckelman Pitch

Coach Joe Judge will pitch John Smith, a right-hander, and John Dieckelman, a southpaw, against the Leopards, who will start Fred Thon on the mound. Lafayette is coached by William F. Coughlin, who played for Washington in the early 1900's. In 20 years of coaching, his teams have won 246 and lost 120.

Perishing Mondorff will take the mound for the Terps against the Wolverines today, as Coach Shipley's squad seeks its fourth victory against two collegiate losses and another to the Baltimore Orioles.

George Washington apparently has the toughest assignment of the three today as the Richmond Spiders have won seven straight and are co-favored with Duke for the Southern Conference championship.

G. W. Hitting Weak

Coach Ed Morris has two former local high school twirlers in mind for the starting assignment, either Jack Redinger, of Roosevelt, or Frank McGinnis, Western. Both are right-handers. The Colonials' main drawback to date has been light hitting, but Lee Lusby and several others were impressive in practice and may boost their averages.

The order will be somewhat reversed tomorrow, with Richmond moving over to Maryland for a 2:30 engagement, and Michigan switching to Georgetown for a 2:30 contest with the Hoyas.

Meanwhile Michigan's tennis team will meet Maryland Saturday morning at 9:30. Maryland's lacrosse squad is prepping for two games next week. Army on Wednesday and Rutgers Saturday, while the trackmen meet Rutgers on the same day. All three matches are away.

Wants Local Foes

The White Oak A. C., of Fredericksburg, Va., has organized for the season and is looking for opponents in Washington, Maryland and nearby Virginia. Those interested write Richard Olive, East Chatham Heights, Fredericksburg, Va.

Notre Dame Alumni Plan for Monday's Annual Dinner

National League Grid Meeting Opens

New York, April 11 (AP)—The National Football League will begin its annual three-day spring meeting here tomorrow.

Election of officers, adoption of the 1940 playing schedule, consideration of amendments to the constitution and playing rules are on the calendar. With club owners, officials and coaches in attendance, several player deals are expected.

One question which is sure to be considered is an increase in the league membership from 10 to 12 clubs. Several cities in the East and Middle West have applied.

Orioles Win, 2-1, Over Detroit In Ice Title Bid

By the Associated Press
Detroit, April 11.—The Baltimore Orioles, prides of the Eastern amateur hockey rink, came back tonight to defeat the Detroit Red Wings, 2 to 1, in a sudden-death overtime battle and preserve their hopes of winning the National Amateur crown.

Norm Calladine, fleet scoring ace of the visitors, drove home the vital counter after 10 minutes and 30 seconds of the overtime to give Baltimore its first victory of the best-of-five series. Detroit has won two games.

The fourth game will be played tomorrow night.

Harry Stuhldreher to Speak At Notre Dame Night Monday

Famous Quarterback of 'Four Horsemen' To Meet Old Teammate at Shoreham Function

Harry Stuhldreher, one of Notre Dame's immortal "Four Horsemen," has accepted an invitation to speak at the Shoreham Hotel Monday night when the local Irish alumni join in the seventeenth annual universal Notre Dame Night.

"Stuhly," former head coach at Villanova, is now director of athletics and football mentor at Wisconsin. Harry was quarterback of the legendary quartet that rode to glory in 1923 as one of the greatest backfields in football history.

Oddly enough, one of Stuhldreher's teammates, also will be at the banquet. He is Forrest (Fod) Cotton, assistant football coach at Catholic University, who was a tackle in the line that was dubbed "The Seven Mules."

Three of the Four Horsemen are "big time" coaches today. Jimmy Crowley is at Fordham. Stuhldreher at Wisconsin, and Elmer Layden at Notre Dame. The fourth member, Don Miller, is a successful lawyer in Cleveland.

With Stuhldreher's acceptance, the list of speakers virtually is complete. Others who will make addresses are United States District Attorney Edward M. Curran; Brian Bell, Assistant Postmaster General; Ambrose J. O'Connell, and Dr. Maurice Sheehy.

Part of the plans for the national hookup call for short addresses by each member of the Four Horsemen. That means Layden and Miller probably will speak from New York, and Crowley from Washington.

Andrew Ponzi Registers Billiard High Run

New York, April 11 (AP)—Andrew Ponzi, of New York, made a high run of 126 to set a new world's record in the world's pocket billiard tournament today.

Ralph Greenleaf, of Cleveland, held the previous record for 11 years with his consecutive string of 126 in 1929.

Footballers Comprise Bulk Of C. U. Team

Trackmen Host in Meet Tomorrow to Eagles and Gallaudet

With football players comprising the bulk of his 33-man squad, Dorsey Griffith, Catholic University track coach, is prepared for the invasion of American University and Gallaudet at the C. U. Stadium tomorrow afternoon.

Despite alarming reports about the improvement of their foes, the Cardinals are confident of victory. Griffith has had his squad out since the return from Easter vacation and the time trials of such mainstays as Johnny Corbett and John Doyle have convinced him C. U. will repeat last year's victory.

Corbett, considered one of the standout middle-distance runners in this area, twice has broken the track record of 4 minutes and 30 seconds in drills this week. Doyle, also a miler, ran a 51-second quarter yesterday and may enter the shorter distance tomorrow.

The football men are a source of worry to Griffith because most of them have had little time to practice their events. Charley Moutenot, C. U.'s all-events man who is entered in the high jump, pole vault and 100-yard dash, is nursing a bruised right leg from scrimmages in John Matzkuhn's so Sachon will have to be at his best.

Some stirring races should develop, particularly in the mile. C. U.'s Corbett will be pitted against Bob Little, of American, and Fred Hinge, of Gallaudet.

The meet will start promptly at 2 p. m.

Inez Bryan, G. P. O. Team Set Two Records at Arcadia

Miss Bryan Registers 154 Game, 399 Set, As Team Hits 1,608 Mark in League

Inez Bryan and her G. P. O. teammates accounted for two season's records in the Federal Ladies League last night at Arcadia, a 399 individual set and 1,608 team set. G. P. O. also had high team game of 578 and Inez Bryan a 154 game.

Four teams moved into a first-place tie in the War Department League at Arcadia, Hydrographics, Engineers, Statistics and Washington Aqueduct. George Hohman had a 144 game and Lloyd Van Horn a 388 set, both rolling for Hydros, while Statistics had 622 and 1,767 to top the teams.

Kann's bowlers took a one-game lead in the Department Store League at Recreation Alley by winning two from Credit Bureau while The Hecht Co. upset the defending champion and runner-up Woodward & Lothrop team in the odd game. Dick Fenton's 386 was high for Hecht's.

Goldenberg's won two from Lansburgh's, and Raleigh Haberdasher won two out of three from Jelleff's. Stanley Beall's 367 led Guy Curran to a whitewash over Gardinckels.

LUCKY STRIKE

Ernie Hauser's 154 game and 411 set paced the leading Shaffer Flower Shop team to a two-game triumph over Lucky Strike Tap room in the National Capital League at Lucky Strike. Shaffer's rolled 641 and 1,384. Red Circle also had a 647 game, and 1,868 set with Lindsay Stott showing the way with 147 and 406. Sam Benson had high game for the night, 163.

Fred Murphy had 154 and 403 for Chaconas Market and the team had high game of 654. Ben McAlwee's Ben-Macs scored a shutout to move up in the standings.

The second-place Maulders won three from Krazy Kats in the Ladies Procurement League at Lucky Strike, with a 536 game and 1,462 set. Margaret Smith was high with FURTHER NOTES ON JITTERBUGS... If he does nothing else, Glenn Miller has succeeded in making the author of this trivia feel like a doddering old man, although I must wait fully eight years before I can run for President. It's the hundreds and hundreds of youngsters who are pouring in and out of the WJWS studios in search of tickets for the Miller broadcasts from the Wardman Park, that are responsible for this ancient feeling.

To revise the scene a bit, you know Miller is the world's greatest exponent of modern dance music, which can be called jitterbug music or loud music, depending upon how you look at it. No matter how you look at it, however, the youngsters think it's marvelous and they come up to WJWS in droves for tickets to Miller's network shows.

WJWS gives out two tickets to each person applying until they are gone. As a result WJWS's halls often resemble a dormitory, what with dozens of kids ripping off their coats, exchanging hats, changing neckties and going through all sorts of contortions to that can return and get some more tickets, hoping the girl distributing the tickets will not recognize the applicant. It's all unnecessary because all jitterbugs look alike, anyhow.

The Children's Hospital has imported a big league circus, the Wirth Brothers show, to help raise funds to defray a deficit the hospital faces. The committee asked WJWS for a temporary loan of one of its bright

LEAP YEAR LADY by ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY

SHAMROCK OTOOLE—Better known to her friends as Smoky, motherless daughter of Clancy O'Toole, pride of the neighborhood, is departed just Smoky was in love with Karl Hetrick whom she had expected to marry.

CLANCY OTOOLE—Aging firefighter, retired because of injuries when a roof toppled in where he was helping to fight a fire some months before. His whole life centered in Smoky, for he had no other children and his wife died of pneumonia some years before.

MRS. HETRICK—Mother of Karl, to whom Smoky was engaged. Mrs. Hetrick helped raise Smoky. She lived next door.

KARL HETRICK—Young fireman protégé of Clancy, who had gone to another city to claim an inheritance left by an uncle.

Smoky, Clancy and Mrs. Hetrick had been together in the O'Toole living room, where they were preparing Smoky's trousseau for her wedding to Karl Hetrick. They discussed plans for the wedding and finally Mrs. Hetrick went home. Clancy fell asleep and Smoky was alone when the bell rang and a small boy delivered a note. It was from Dagne Olsen saying that she was marrying Karl and telling Smoky herself because Karl hadn't had the nerve. Smoky went over to Mrs. Hetrick's and was shocked to find that Mrs. Hetrick had feared just this happening, but had hoped Karl would forget Dagne and marry Smoky. Smoky was shocked and bitter, for she had had happy dreams of life with Karl.

Chapter 4

SHE HAD talked with Karl about their long summer evenings, hidden away on the little bench in the tiny grape arbor in the back yard. And Karl had looked at her intimately and held her so closely, her breath almost left her body. She had wondered how they could wait for the time to come when their love would receive the blessing of the Church and she need no longer push Karl away.

But Karl had not waited. Not for her, at least. She could not bring herself to say even to herself that Dagne was a bad girl who had taken her Karl away with her lovely body. Even if Mrs. Hetrick did think it was just an affair.

Secretly, Shamrock had always envied Dagne for her tall blonde gracefulness and her native poise. She had a grand manner, and even if she and Smoky had never got along, Smoky had to admit Olie Olsen's daughter was the most beautiful girl in Astoria.

Their rivalry for social and school honors had started with kindergarten days, and never ended. Even in grade school Smoky could see Dagne casting eyes at Karl, but he inherited money from his Uncle Augie before she hooked him.

Moments of Bitterness

How to break the news to Clancy was now Shamrock's chief concern. With his bad heart, the shock might prove too great. But, of course, he would have to know, and the sooner the better. It helped her to keep herself together, knowing she must not let her father know her heart was breaking.

Shamrock finally got up and walked to the mirror over the kitchen sink and pinched a little color into her chalk-white cheeks. The face that stared back at her was heart-shaped, and the little, slightly turned-up nose had a bridge of tiny freckles that lent her a gamine charm. Smoky fluffed her long curly shoulder bob and took a drink of cold water before going into the living room.

The radio was playing a lovely, tender violin melody that Smoky could not bear, and she walked stiffly over to the stand beside the couch and turned it off. Clancy had awakened and was playing solitaire with a bottle of beer beside him and he looked surprised.

"What's eatin' ya, darlin'?" he said good-humoredly. "I thought you liked a fiddle."

Smoky averted her face and sat down by the window. "I do," she said uncertainly, "only I just don't feel like music tonight."

The father chuckled. "Just like your mother! Hittin' the clouds one minute and feelin' low as a worm the next. The temperamental two of ye! Well, find somethin' lively, then, on the radio."

"I don't feel like music," Smoky sighed. "Not just now, Pop."

Clancy pushed the card table away and a look of deep concern crossed his face.

"Are ya sick, darlin'?" he asked solicitously. "Or maybe it's the weddin' that's got ye down. Come over here to your old father."

Telling Her Father

He held out his arms, and Smoky, with a little stifled sob, ran over and threw herself into his arms. His big, dark hands stroked her restfully. Finally, Shamrock, with a great effort, forced herself to get up and sit on the couch beside her father. Then she looked at him closely.

"Did you know, Pop, that Karl has been going around with that Dagne Olsen?"

Clancy flushed uncomfortably. That he forced gayety, into his reply.

"I'd heard rumors. But ye wouldn't be goin' to let a little thing like that get ye down. The lad was just havin' a little dink before he settled. Sure, we're all alike, us men."

That gave Smoky just the chance she was looking for to break the news to Clancy. She said angrily: "Oh, is that so! And you'd be expectin' me to marry a man after he's been runnin' around with another woman 'right under my nose?"

The father argued for an hour, but Smoky remained adamant. It was the next morning, after a sleepless night, that she told her father Karl was going to marry Dagne.

Clancy knew he must get a grip on himself for Smoky's sake. Smoky was afraid she showed her real feelings, her father might have another heart attack.

So they pretended great anger and contempt and vowed by all the gods that no one should ever know it made the slightest bit of difference that Smoky's fireman had walked off and married a prosperous Olsen the minute he laid his hands on a few dollars.

Behind closed doors, Shamrock gave way to her grief and was certain she must die with the shame and the disappointment. Clancy's broad shoulders drooped and his once-rugged face showed its strain only when his daughter was safely out of the way.

The morning after Smoky received Dagne's note saying that she was going away to marry Karl, Mrs. Hetrick packed hurriedly and left for her sister's home in Newark. She vowed that never as long as she lived would she set foot inside the door where her son lived with that Olsen woman. Smoky promised to visit her often.

Unused Wedding Gown

Shamrock went on with her housework as though nothing had happened, and in the afternoon took her wedding gown from the closet, tied it tightly in a box, and hid it away back on a top shelf with her white satin slippers and veil. Her hands shook so that she could scarcely tie the string and the lump in her throat almost stifled her, but her eyes were large and free from tears and bluer than ever because of their brave effort to keep dry.

Mrs. Clark, 94, Dies; Resident For 70 Years

Was a Descendant Of Notable Family; Rites Tomorrow

Mrs. Jessie S. Clark, widow of Frank Atherton Clark, died yesterday at her home, 5437 Connecticut avenue northwest, following a long illness. She was 94.

Mrs. Clark, daughter of the late Maj. Lyman Foote, one-time Army surgeon, was a native of Cooperstown, N. Y. She had lived in Washington since 1870.

She was a great-granddaughter of Judge William Cooper, founder of Cooperstown, and a member of the Fourth and Sixth Congresses. An ancestor, Isaac Cooper, was the elder brother of James Fenimore Cooper and she was a direct descendant of Lewis Morris, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. Surviving Mrs. Clark are a niece, Mrs. Elizabeth Cooper Keese, of Cooperstown, and three nephews, Lieut. Col. William Cooper Foote, United States Army; Francis Chandler Foote, of Sewickley, Pa., and Morris Cooper Foote, of this city, and a great-niece, Mrs. Victor F. Piper, also of Washington. Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow from St. Mark's Church. Interment will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

War Convinces Navy Battleships Rule the Seas

The European war has convinced the Navy, more than ever before, that the battleship rules the sea, despite the advances in air power.

This was the gist of testimony given by Rear Admiral S. M. Robinson, chief of the Navy's Construction Bureau, before a Senate Appropriations subcommittee considering the naval appropriations bill, and made public by the committee yesterday. The bill carries funds to start construction of two 45,000-ton dreadnaughts.

Admiral Robinson told the committee it was the Navy's opinion that Great Britain controls the seas because of her preponderance over Germany in large battleships.

The Federal Diary:

Roosevelt Urges Agencies to Use Mails Instead of Messengers

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt proposed yesterday that Government agencies in Washington begin using the "most efficient" postal system in the world.

His fourth reorganization plan, suggested turning over to the Post-office Department the trucking services now operated independently by separate agencies. His proposal hinted that the present messenger services are a relic of "colonial days."

"In the early colonial days the interchange of correspondence and messages was by the simple hand-to-hand method," his message said. "Gradually a more systematic device became necessary to transport messages, with the resultant evolution of the postal service."

Sees Paradox

President Roosevelt said that while business and private citizens use the service, the Government in Washington has "permitted a multiplicity of interdepartmental messenger services." President Roosevelt said that some citizens must have wondered at the "paradox."

His plan proposed a regular postal schedule for transporting mail, packages and the like, from building to building, and reducing to a minimum the "constant dispatching of messengers on so-called urgent and emergency errands."

A budget official said the effect of the plan on the present messengers could be found only after studying further where to draw a line between trucking work and miscellaneous messenger service.

Two Agencies Shifted

The Forest Service sailed untouched through the reorganization plan, fulfilling recent predictions of its officials, while two other major agencies were started on their way out of the Agriculture Department. The Weather Bureau would be transferred to the Department of Commerce, and the Food and Drug Administration to the Federal Security Agency, both as units. In addition the Interior Department would take over some functions of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service.

More than 600 Washington employees, officials estimated, would be involved in the Weather Bureau and the Food and Drug transfers, while the field employees concerned total about 2,300.

Nearest approach to expression of an official attitude on the transfers was that they would be taken "like good soldiers." Food and Drug officials had expected some kind of shift, but they had feared it might put their organization under the Public Health Service.

Trade groups had opposed such a move on the ground that it would give doctors supervision over primarily economic matters. The new plan leaves two small divisions of the agency, the insecticide and naval stores, in Agriculture, and places the rest on a par with Public Health Service. While the President called for better coordination between Food and Drug and Public Health work, he said the former would be "a separate unit."

Alexander Berger Dies at 82; Grain And Rail Official

Barkley Pleads Liberal Cause At State Party

Jefferson Wanted Flexible Government, Virginians Told

Pleading the cause of liberalism, Senator Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, last night called for adherence to Jeffersonian principles to meet the changing complexities of American government.

"If Jefferson were alive today," Barkley said at the Virginia State Society dinner in the Willard Hotel honoring the famous statesman, "he would try to keep the Constitution and Government of the United States as flexible as possible in order to make it what it should be—a servant of the people."

No generation, Barkley declared, has the right to bind the intellectual and political freedom of another generation.

Earlier, Dr. John L. Newcomb, president of the University of Virginia, said: "Thank God, that in the United States, at least, this generation is a liberal one."

Also speaking at the gathering was Gov. Price of Virginia, who extolled the virtues of Jefferson and outlined the great part in Virginia history played by the University of Virginia, which Jefferson founded, and around which the State is developing its entire educational system.

Presiding over the affair was Christopher B. Garnett, president of the society. Representing the University of Virginia Alumni Association was Charles R. Fenwick. Entertainment included songs by the University of Virginia quartet and a Technicolor film showing architecture and growth of the university, explained by Prof. Edwin S. Campbell, of the institution's department of architecture.

Color Movies of Parks To Be Shown Tonight

Color movies of U. S. National Parks will be shown tonight at 8 o'clock at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Ninth and Massachusetts avenue northwest. The films are the property of Dr. J. V. Hansen, world traveler, who will discuss the scenes as they are screened.

Dined in Honor of Virginia's 'Famous Son'

Among those who attended the annual dinner last night of the Society of Virginia in honor of Thomas Jefferson were (left to right) Dr. John L. Newcomb, president of the University of Virginia; Gov. Price of Virginia; Senator Barkley and Col. Christopher B. Garnett, president of the society. Barkley spoke on "Jefferson's Democratic Ideals" and Price's address was on "Virginia."

Death Deplored, And Undertakers Leave Meeting

Lincoln H. Lippincott, nationally known safety advocate, was citing the tragedies of careless and reckless driving.

"Death," he said, "can and must be eliminated from our national roads."

At that point, two men arose from their table, put on their hats and walked out.

They were two of Washington's better-known undertakers.

$8,000 From In-Laws Chinese Girl Awarded

Two women and ten men jurors in the District Court yesterday ordered Charles Lew Wah and his wife, Lew She Wah, to pay $8,000 damages for breaking up her marriage to their son, Norman Lew.

Mrs. Lew, a smartly dressed Baltimore Chinese girl, testified that her in-laws approved the marriage but later rebuked her for her modern ways and put her out of their home. Lew Wah operates a laundry and parking lot at 606 Fifth street.

Red Cross Sends Clothes to Europe

Three packing cases each, containing 630 articles of clothing addressed to the Red Cross societies in Poland, Finland and England, and one case of 1,302 surgical dressings for Finland were shipped yesterday by the Washington Red Cross Chapter.

The local Red Cross unit revealed that more than 12,000 surgical dressings were sent to Finland in March. These were made by ten production groups working in the Chapter House. During the past month, according to the local chapter, 633 volunteers worked 1,396 hours making 46,916 dressings.
